HUNTING WOMAN IN SHOOTING

Dr. Cragin announced that John Jacob Astor the 5th weighed seven and three-quarter pounds.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The $3,000,000 baby was born at the Astor mansion, No. 840 Fifth avenue, today. It is a boy and will bear the name of its father, John Jacob Astor, who went down with the Titanic in the greatest marine disaster of modern times.

The birth of the child was announced by Dr. Edwin B. Cragin in the following statement:

A child was born to Mrs. John Jacob Astor at 8:15 o'clock this morning. It is a boy, and its name is John Jacob Astor. The mother is in good condition.

By the will of the late Colonel John Jacob Astor this posthumous heir was left $3,000,000. There had been rumors circulated that if the posthumous heir were a boy, a contest would be instituted by Colonel Astor's widow, Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor, to secure greater wealth for her son. This matter will be determined later.

Preparations for the arrival of the millionaire baby were made early yesterday

U. S. CAVALRYMEN THREATENED WITH ANNIHILATION BY MEXICAN REBELS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—News that annihilation is threatening a detachment of the Third cavalry, under command of Major Sedgwick Rice on the Mexican border reached the war department today.

Brigadier-General Steever wired the secretary of war that Major Rice reported 1,100 rebels gathered at Palomas directly across the border from his present post; that the revolutionists were being rapidly reinforced by small bands and they apparently were preparing to attack the American force.

Major Rice appealed for aid, but General Steever replied that none of his troops could be spared. Thereupon Major-General Atwood wired General Steever to send help to Major Rice at once, calling on Washington for more troops if they were needed.

Major Rice's detachment consists of only a troop and a half of cavalry with comparatively little ammunition and no field artillery.

AUTO IS WRECKED; DRIVER ARRESTED

An automobile owned by the Kirby garage of Revere was wrecked early today in Main street, Watertown. The occupants were Thomas J. Holmes and Clifton G. Polk, both of Revere. Holmes was so badly injured that it was found necessary to send him to the Waltham Hospital. Polk was placed under arrest for operating an automobile without a license. According to the story told the police, the two men were coming down Main street when the steering gear broke. The machine plunged into a telegraph post.

TWO CHILDREN IN LYNN ARE BITTEN BY MADDENED DOG

Two children in Lynn were badly bitten today by a dog that is supposed to have been mad. The wounds of the children, Gerfo Sicilian, six, of No. 20 Suffolk street, and Angelina De Lotti, seven, of No. 18 Suffolk street, were cauterized by physicians.

The police are hunting the dog, which will be shot.

The two children were playing on the sidewalk near their homes, the boy riding a bicycle and the girl running along on the sidewalk with him.

The dog, which no one in that locality seems to know, dashed out of a yard and bit the boy on the wrist, knocking him from the bicycle.

The dog sprang upon the little girl, knocking her down and tearing her shoulder severely.

120 FROM GROUNDED LINER HERE

One hundred and twenty passengers from the Dominion Atlantic Railway liner Prince George, which grounded at Yarmouth, N. S., Monday night, arrived here today on her sister ship, the Prince Arthur. The Prince Arthur had 250 passengers of her own, making a total of 370 men, women and children. This number taxed the cabin accommodations of the Prince Arthur.

Relatives at Dock.

A throng of relatives and friends of the belated passengers was at the D. A. R. line docks. When the people from the Prince George came down the gang plank they were warmly greeted.

Some of the folks at home were so alarmed by the story of the grounding of the Prince George—even though the dispatches were reassuring—that they almost looked upon their friends as having returned from the dead.

There were many such expressions as: "Well, dear, I was afraid I wouldn't ever see you again. Weren't you awfully frightened? Isn't it exciting?—almost like being in a real wreck—tell us all about it—"

Well, Well! Woman Smokes Cigarette in Laconia Lounge

It wasn't the long list of notables, topped by a lord, a baron and President Hadley of Yale, it wasn't these that caused the biggest stir on board the Cunarder Laconia, which docked today from Liverpool. It was a cigarette and a fashionably gowned woman that gave the passengers a shock that beat anything the ocean could do with the big liner.

Ithan, lest the Anti-Cigarette League hear:)

Yes, the woman did smoke the cigarette. No doubt of that. The passengers said so, and the ship news reporters, when they clambered aboard the Laconia, saw it too.

It happened in the lounge room. She sat playing solitaire. Her two sons romped about her. Alternately she puffed and turned the cards.

Her attitude was absolutely nonchalant. She was utterly oblivious of all the stir she was causing. Later, when she was being greeted by a group of society people on the pier, they said her name was Mrs. F. H. Robbs of New York.

The cigarette smoking was about the only incident of note on the Laconia's trip across. There was no end of notables, beginning with Lord Channing of Wellingborough, England, until recently Lord Channing was plain Sir Francis Channing, one of the Liberal leaders in Parliament. He was raised to the peerage on the King's birthday.

Lord Channing comes to America to spend the season end with Lady Channing and her family at Cohasset. Lady Channing was Miss Bryant, an American girl.

Among the passengers were also Sir John Harrington and Lady Harrington. Sir John is K. C. M. G. Lady Harrington was Miss McMillan of Manchester-by-the-Sea, where the couple will spend the rest of the season with relatives.

Rain this afternoon brought cooling relief to Greater Boston, after one had cried and several had been prostrated as a result of the heat and humidity of the morning hours. The first drops began falling shortly after noon, and with them came comfort for pedestrians who had been sweltering and wilting on the streets up to the hour of noon.

The death resulting from the heat was that of Frank Janis, sixty years of age, of No. 55 Liverpool street, East Boston. The death was the second in Boston from the heat in the past twenty-four hours.

At noon the mercury stood at 86. In less than twenty minutes the temperature showed a drop of eight degrees.

The afternoon made the day look as if it were going to be a genuine scorcher clear through. At 7 o'clock the mercury showed up at 75 degrees. Two hours later it had shot up to 85. Everybody complained.

For tomorrow the weather man today predicted cooler weather, which looks plausible enough, following the rain that made life worth while this afternoon. So all up, fellows. It's the lucky seventh for the weather man!

ITALIANS SEIZE TURKS ON STEAMER

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Aug. 13.—International complications involving Italy and Great Britain are threatened as the result of the holdup of a Roumanian mail steamer from Constantinople in Egyptian waters today, and the capture of a number of Turkish officers who were on board.

At the time the mail steamer was only a few miles off this port, and protests have been made by the Turkish authorities that the action of the Italians was in direct violation of Egyptian neutrality. They threaten to bring the matter formally to the attention of the powers.

The Red Sox open their long home series, after the triumphant trip through the West, at Fenway Park today, with the St. Louis Browns as their opponents in a double-header. The first game will start at 2 o'clock.

A tremendous crowd is sure to be on hand to welcome the victorious band of ball tossers. Manager Stahl and his men are now filled with confidence that the next American League pennant will float from the Back Bay grounds, and they are hoping to add a world's pennant along with it.

The predicted "break" in the Red Sox has failed to appear. Instead, the local warriors are going along in even improved form. On the other hand, the Senators, who have been runners-up for some time, are beginning to show signs of the strain and are falling off in their work. The Athletics are still troublesome, but the Speed Boys figure they have a safe enough lead to keep them in the front until the finish.

Manager Stahl is anxious to capture both of today's games. In the first battle he intends to send Buck O'Brien to the mound and for the second contest will have Hugh Bedient in readiness. Joe Wood may not be used in the St. Louis series, in order to give his arm a needed rest.

The Sox do not expect any walkover in today's contests. It is recognized that the Browns, under Manager Stovall, are showing improved aggregation of players.

In the last western trip they made the Sox split even with them in four games, and then later took three of four games from the Senators. Stovall has them shooting at their best now.

TWO MEN DROWN, ONE IN MERRIMAC, OTHER IN A CANAL

LOWELL, Aug. 14.—Two drownings occurred here and at Tyngsboro today. In the latter town Charles Adelard Gerrals, thirty, of No. 39 Pink street, this city, was thrown into the Merrimac River when a motorboat in which he was riding with four companions, struck a floating timber and tipped over. Gerrals was drowned. The other four escaped. The dead man's body was recovered. While bathing in the Pawtucket Canal here today, Herve Boucher, thirteen, of No. 528 Suffolk street, this city, sank from sight. His companions in the water were unable to rescue him. His body was recovered.

ASSASSINATE AMERICAN VICE CONSUL M'MASTER IN U. S. COLOMBIA

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—William B. Macmaster, American vice and deputy consul at Cartagena, Colombia, has been assassinated. This news reached the State Department today.

McMaster, who was an American born in Colombia, was shot in the back while hunting, apparently by one of his guides. Other attempts to murder him had been foiled, several of the conspirators having been recently jailed for participating in those plots. The vice consul was a wealthy banana owner who had trouble with his employes.

The State Department has ordered an investigation.

"Of the Republicans who voted for Roosevelt in the April primaries, fully 70 per cent. support him against Taft in November," Mr. Baxter declared.

GAME GETS THEM ALL, SAYS JACK ROSE

(Copyright, 1912, by Star Company. All rights reserved. Any infringement will be vigorously prosecuted.)

By JACK ROSE.

The gambler who declares that Lieutenant Becker forced him into the plot to slay Herman Rosenthal.

The dangerous man to a gambling house is the man who comes in, gets lucky, wins what he wants, cashes in and departs. He may go somewhere else and lose what he won from us.

Everybody connected with a house from the doorman up to the principal owner is trained to one important point. He must try to keep the winners playing. The loser is sure to come back to look for even.

Many are the methods employed in keeping an unusually large winner at play.

I was present one night at a play where a young man was brought in by one of the "steerers." He started playing roulette and his luck was phenomenal. He seems as if everything he placed his chips that number was sure to come up. His winnings soon amounted to about four or five thousand dollars.

The colored attendant was right at his elbow and each time the player began to figure up his winnings the attendant attracted his attention by offering him a fresh glass of wine.

The dealer would spin the ball. It was time for him to get his chips down before the ball stopped. This was kept up until soon his run of luck was over. In a short time he was broke.

Keeping a Winner at Play.

In conversation after the play with another player the attention of this man was called to the fact that he was at one time between four and five thousand dollars winner. He refused to believe it. When his attention was called to the fact that he had thirty-five brown checks each representing one hundred dollars, besides other checks of lesser value, he collapsed.

Another night a man from the West dropped into a faro bank and began playing. Before long by cashing in each deal he had about $7,000 in his pocket and $200 worth of checks in front of him that he was trying to lose and quit.

But he couldn't lose them. Soon the five hundred worth of chips had grown into $2,000.

It was then about 4 a.m. He called the attendant and said: "Get me a taxi. The attendant bowed and left apparently to order his taxi. The player kept on playing, waiting for the taxi. About an hour elapsed when his run of luck changed. He had lost the two thousand he had in checks, had bought another thousand and that was almost gone.

He turned and said to the attendant, "How about that taxi?"

"Coming, sir," replied the well-trained boy.

In the meanwhile, he had another drink, a fresh perfecto, another deal and another thousand dollars' worth of checks went very fast.

Another turn to the attendant, "How about my taxi?"

"Just telephoned again, sir. It is a snowy night and taxis are all at work."

How One Winner Lost.

A fresh cigar, another stack of chips at a thousand a stack, and so it went. He finally was so dazed by the excitement of the high play and the wine and the big black cigar that he forgot about his taxi.

When he had purchased a new stack it was at $500 a stack. This showed to the proprietors that this was the end of his money. After making a few bets with the last stack and losing them, the attendant walked over and very respectfully said:

"Sir, your taxi has arrived and is waiting for you."

He was a good game sport. He turned around and in the drawl of a man under the influence of liquor said:

"Are you sure it is my taxi?"

I am thinking of the man who, last Winter, went into a club up-town where they were playing stud-poker. He had been having a long run of bad luck and was very low in cash and spirits.

He sat around with a few others who were in the same position. They kept talking of the good old days of racing and of money aplenty.

The latest arrival spoke of it being about Christmas time. For the first time in many years he said his folks at home would not be the recipients of anything at his hands.

A more optimistic member of the party said: "Why, fellow, Christmas is almost a week off, and you and I have seen many strange things happen to a gambler in a week."

"Yes, I know," said Lou. "When racing was good a man had a chance. This time of the year I used to be down at New Orleans, and was always sure to have plenty of money."

Wins $500 on $25 Stake.

Soon one of the poker players at the tables got up. In cashing in his chips he looked around and saw Lou. He told the dealer to give him cash for all his chips but $25.

He called Lou over—he knew him as an expert poker player, and said: "Lou, play those checks. See if you can win yourself a little Christmas money. If you win just leave my $25 here for me and keep the winnings."

Lou sat in and played that game until the following night about 8 o'clock. When it broke up Lou cashed in five hundred and some odd dollars, leaving the $25 for his benefactor.

He was the happiest man in all the world. The Christmas gifts he worried so much about were an assured thing.

The following night he returned to the place after having left $250 with a trusted friend with instructions to keep that for him until the following week. He played and won $500 or $400. Lou went home and added $250 more to the plant for the Christmas gifts for those at home.

The next night he came again, sat in the game and began to lose. Soon he lost all he had with him. Then he started to sending messages begging his friend who was the guardian of his fund not to hold him to his promise.

Loses All; Ends Life.

He explained that the game was so soft that he would surely win; that his present losses had been brought about through extraordinary pranks of the cards but, as he said: class will tell and I am the class of that crowd."

His friend sent him $100. That soon went. Then another note for $100 more which went the way of the others. Another note and his friend sent him the entire amount he was holding. Morning saw Lou leaving he place penniless. As he was walking up the street he met an acquaintance who said to him, "say Lou who was the 'boob' the crowd up street have been playing with and using marked cards with?"

Lou did not answer, but went home. His body was found, in his room, a bullet through his brain. A note on the table said, "A gambler's life is not worth while."

Subsequently, events that led to my meeting with Lieut. Becker, my association with Herman Rosenthal, all these are matters that at present cannot be touched on. They are all in the hands of District Attorney Whitman in the document issued by the gambler's my "squeal."

While on the subject of "squealing," the reason there isn't more "squealing" or in fact a general rush to the District Attorney's office, is that gamblers don't know how to do it and get away without being branded a "squealer."

There are no scruples among most of the big or little about "squealing," but they object to doing it in the form prescribed in this case, seeing District Attorney Whitman, appearing before the Grand Jury, and then in open court.

That is not the way of the "high class gambler." His way of squealing has more finesses to it. He enjoys the friendship of some one who is taking care of the place. To this man he has proved that he is a man who in stormy times like the present will stand the "acid test" and prove he is no "squealer."

The hundred and one times that he has "squealed" about opposition places does not count. What he told was not in the form of a squeal. It was just to have his friend know what was going on around him.

The opposition place that has been "squealed" on does not enjoy the intimate acquaintance or friendship of so big a man as the other fellow, so the poor fellow has got to do his "squealing" in the crude way of the Houston street gambler. He must write anonymously either as a "public spirited citizen" or the "heart-broken mother or wife" whose son or husband is losing all his wages in so and so's gambling house.

If Uncle Sam knew the exact figures as to how the gamblers is enriched annually by these letters he would insist that all "squealing" be done entirely through the mail.

These are a few of the ways; there are others more drastic, but to "squeal" as Jack Rose did with only the fact that he was being made the "goat," with the electric chair staring him in the face, he has committed the unpardonable sin of "squealing" in the open.

BANKS ASSIST WHITMAN PROBE

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Aided at last by the New York bankers, District Attorney Whitman has discovered that Police Lieutenant Charles Becker has deposited at least $58,845 in four New York banks since last Fall when he was put in charge of the "strong-arm squad" to "clean up" the underworld.

That Becker "cleaned up" marvellously well is shown by the amazing figures of his bank deposits on an official salary of only $2,200 a year.

At his salary rate it would take Becker about twenty-six years to accumulate his big deposits, even supposing he saved every cent, with no outlay for living.

The District Attorney expects to prove that Becker's deposits to other banks than the four already revealed will amount to $200,000.

Here is the list of Becker's deposits in four banks, as reported to the District Attorney at the instance of the Clearing House Committee:

Becker's Deposits.
Corn Exchange Bank, between Nov. 1, 1911, and March, 1912	$20,615
Corn Exchange Bank, during May, 1912	4,330
Corn Exchange Bank, during April, 1912	6,000
Corn Exchange Bank, during July, 1912	10,900
Total in Corn Exchange Bank	$50,845
Empire Savings Bank, during April, 1912	3,500
West Side Savings Bank, during April, 1912	3,000
Lincoln Trust Company, during April, 1912	1,500
Total last three banks named	$8,000
Grand total discovered to date	$58,845

District Attorney Whitman now estimates that Becker's fortune in bank accounts and safe deposit hoards, will total $200,000. Against four other police officers evidence has been secured of accounts totalling over $75,000, and District Attorney Whitman declared his belief that one man had amassed $1,000,000.

Says Becker Paid Assassins.

A startling development in the case was the testimony said to have been given by Rose before the Grand Jury to the effect that Becker was the real paymaster of the Rosenthal assassins. The story told by Rose, it is said, was that when Becker "Bridgy" Webber and Rose met in front of the Murray Hill baths on the morning of the murder, Becker borrowed from "Bridgy" Webber the $1,000 "blood money" in large bills handed it to Rose, who handed it to Schepps, who then passed it on to "Gyp the Blood" and his three thug companions.

FIRST L CASE UP ON APPEAL

The first trial of an appealed case growing out of the "L" strike began before Judge Dana in the Superior Criminal Court today. The defendant, Frank McCarthy, a former conductor employed by the company, was charged with assault on Edward Gallagher on Warren street, the night of June 7. In the Roxbury court McCarthy was found guilty and sentenced to one month.

Inspector Burr testified that in a shower of missiles thrown at he car the motorman, Edward Gallagher, was struck and cut in the face. Inspector Burr was positive that he saw McCarthy throw some ragged substance about the size of an apple.

To date about 1,600 of the striking Elevated motormen and conductors have registered and returned to work. All the men are being rated as previous to the strike as quickly as possible.

About 1,000 new men, hired during the strike, have left, most of them having been given a week's notice (with guaranteed pay of $12). The road, as it had agreed to, has paid the expenses to their homes.

The police of Boston and other New England cities were today asked to be on the lookout for the robber who alarmed the entire Summer colony at Bar Harbor, Me., and succeeded in stealing jewels worth at least $10,000. The letters sent out by Chief of Police Gerry of Bar Harbor make public the first list of the jewels which were stolen from the Summer home of Edgar Scott of Philadelphia. The burglar also made an attempt to rob Kenarden lodge, the home of Mrs. John S. Kennedy of New York.

STEEL BILL IS VETOED BY TAFT; THREE REASONS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Undeterred by the action of the Democratic-insurgent Republican coalition in the House which passed the wool bill over his veto yesterday, President Taft today sent a message to Congress in which he vetoed the steel bill passed by the House and Senate and sent to him for his signature.

The President based his veto of the Steel bill—the metal schedule of the tariff law—on the ground that it was framed "without consulting the representatives of the tariff board and provided only for revenue and not for the protection of American industries."

In a lengthy message, which accompanied the bill back to Congress the President enumerated his objections under three principal heads.

First, he took exceptions to the act of Congress in overlooking the publications of the tariff board, and chided the House for paying no attention to the findings of this body.

Second, he objected to the schedule because is provides a tariff for revenue only and not for protection.

Third, because of the tremendous immediate effect on millions of workingmen and their families and hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of goods without first providing for a careful and disinterested inquiry into the conditions of the whole industry.

OFFER REWARD FOR QUINCY FIREBUGS

Mayor Stone of Quincy today offered a reward of $250 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who set fire to several granite sheds in Quincy. Mayor Stone suggested the matter to the City Council, the members of which instructed him to offer the reward.

SOCIETY WOMAN WHOSE NEW FAD STARTLED CASINO

Mrs. Alexander Dallas Pratt, who is wearing stockings of different colors at same time.

'One Stocking White, One Black, Hi Diddle Dumpling Mrs. Pratt'

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 14.—Mrs. Alexander Dallas Pratt startled the Casino by appearing in a one-piece gown of white, from beneath the skirt of which there peeped one ankle clad in white, while the other was in sombre black. The news of the latest fad soon spread, and people flocked in to see for themselves the thing that they could not believe.

Mrs. Pratt was accompanied by Joseph Harriman and, as one lady said, "Joe certainly does look uncomfortable." But not Mrs. Pratt. She chatted with Miss Edyth Deacon of Boston, who was playing tennis, and talked with several friends, but not one mentioned the subject of stockings, although like was the subject in the minds of all.

Bets were made that she would not do it again, and found ready takers among Mrs. Pratt's friends, who are positive that she will wear pink and blue stockings if she cares to. And the question agitating Newport is, what will a day bring forth in the way of stockings?

FINED FOR DIGGING CLAMS MINUS LICENSE

Charles Larson, William Anderson, Lawrence Gould, Ralph Nelson, Enal Olson, Nels Nelson, Thomas Morian, Augustine R. Jones, John Newman and Edward Anderson, all of whom said they lived in Cohasset, were fined $7 each by Judge Cook in the Quincy Police Court today for digging clams without a license last Sunday on Half Moon Island, a quarter of a mile from Hough's Neck. H. H. Burke was set free because he had a permit. The men had forty-two bushels of clams dug at the time of their arrest.

15,000 People—Attendance for 3 Days

My 4th Anniversary Shoe Sale turned out to be the greatest of its kind ever conducted in Boston. For the last three days of last week over 15,000 people—men, women and children attended the greatest money saving shoe sale of the century. I hired 30 extra salesmen and handled this tremendous business without a single dissatisfied customer. Hundreds of people bought shoes enough to last their entire family a year. Women fairly gasped with amazement at the wonderful bargains. Small retail shoe dealers from all over Greater Boston, flocked to my sale. To give the public a chance, I made a rule at 4 o'clock Friday P. M. to sell no retail shoe dealers over 3 pairs of anything. This rule goes for the balance of this sale.

The entire stock will be cleaned up in the next 3 days. If you have never attended a Sheinwald sale, it will pay you to investigate; the values, styles and low prices will astound you.

Investigator Tells How He Lived in Boston on $1 a Day

Shows How Stranger with Slim Purse Seeking Work Fares in Boston.

What is the lowest cost of decent living for a young man who has come to Boston to look for work?

By "decent" is meant a living that is as economical as is consistent with health, cleanliness and a necessary amount of comfort.

It means neither luxury on the one hand nor semi-starvation and unhealthy quarters on the other.

The Boston AMERICAN says that a young man can obtain decent living in Boston for at least one dollar a day. This includes a room, food, two cigars, a motion picture show and a news paper.

The AMERICAN makes this assertion on the authority of one of its reporters.

This reporter went out and lived decently at the rate of one dollar a day. He assumed that he was a stranger with little money.

Then he wrote a detailed report of it all, with places, prices and other circumstances.

The AMERICAN prints the reporter's story of his first day's wrestle with the high (or low) cost of living. His second day's story will tell of his search for work.

Meanwhile the reporter is continuing his experiment. Maybe he will be able, with experience, to lower his dollar-a-day rate, without impairing the standard of his living. This remains to be seen.

Meanwhile, here is the story of the first day:

By BENJAMIN JONES.

FIRST DAY.

I have lived for at least one day on an economic basis. I have enjoyed a night's sleep as refreshing as one would desire, have eaten all the good food which any sane man ought to eat, have attended a motion picture show and smoked two so-called ten-cent cigars. My total expense, including my room, was $1, one large silver dollar, which, during the course of twenty-four hours became split in smaller and smaller sections until it vanished.

Upon leaving the AMERICAN office, I went direct to the North Station. My idea was to put myself in the same position as I found myself ten years ago, when I first reached Boston, merely a young man looking for employment and with only a very young and slim purse.

Arriving at the station shortly before noon, I began to inquire of various uniformed men how I could secure a good, comfortable room in a decent part of the city for a moderate price. It is to be regretted that none of them could answer my question.

Let me say here that at every terminal there should be established by some church or society a bureau of information where the young man or woman coming to a big city could learn where to find suitable quarters.

The heathen Chinese are attended in such a manner as to make us proud of our institutions. But the problem of caring for the physical and moral welfare of the young men and women who daily arrive in our city is of course of no consequence.

My experience as a reporter has of course taught me that a policeman is usually the best of all persons to give you advice as to hotels or restaurants.

Leaving the noisy depot, I walked half way across the street and accosted an officer. His number is 197. And he is a gentleman too. I don't know him personally and this is not a boost for him, but mention that he deserves. I asked him where I could obtain a room. He told me about several places to me, but as he cried me closely he saw that I did not care to spend the money that the downtown hotels ask for lodging.

He suggested that I walk up to Beacon Hill and find some lodging house. As I went my way through the West End streets I could only think of my experience at the station and wonder just how many young men and women have fallen into evil company, merely because they failed to get the right start upon their arrival.

Arriving at Cambridge street, I began to call at the houses where furnished room signs are displayed in windows. It is true that the prices for rooms did not vary to any great extent, but the furnishings and atmosphere in them did. In the cheap lodging houses was usually found a $1.50 to $5 a week.

Rather a Bench on Common

I would prefer, however, to sleep on a bench in the park rather than run chances in some of the houses I visited. As I reached the top of Beacon Hill I found the rooms better, but more expensive. Small rooms were scarce. The persons who ran the houses explained this by saying there was such a demand for them that one was rarely vacant.

At the Beacon Hotel I found that I could secure a good room for seventy-five cents a night. The room was good and the house an admirable one for a young man to live in, but yet the price was slightly over my limit. Finally I found a place that suited me perfectly. It was a small home for bachelors, at No. 4A Allston street.

As I entered I was impressed by its cleanliness. The price of rooms ranged from two to seven dollars a week. There was one two dollar room vacant. After asking a few questions to determine whether I was a suitable lodger, the landlady of said only her name; showed me to the room. It was small but clean. There was a good carpet of a reddish hue on the floor, the wall paper was attractive and the furniture, consisting of two chairs, a bureau, dressing cabinet and single bed, was in good condition. There was one large window, which admitted air and light in abundance. This part of my task was completed. I paid for my room, secured my key and went out. This time I sought a place to eat.

I avoided the hotels and Bohemian places and sought a reasonable, but clean place. To be sure I had a long walk around the streets to locate the place that suited me. I mean from the outside.

Finds an Eating Place.

Finally I stopped in front of Spaulding's luncheon in Court street. I noticed as I looked in the window that there were no tables and naturally knew that it would not be expensive. I went in and was agreeably surprised with the appearance of this eating house. The white walls were immaculate. The tile floor was exceptionally clean and the chairs equipped with the individual bench upon which you put your food.

The marble counter where the dishes are found is in the rear of the room. I walked over to it and said to the white-coated clerk that I was in quest of food and asked him to suggest something good. There were a few modest signs around the room, but I did not care to make myself conspicuous by looking at them in order to pick out the real cheap things on the menu. Before the clerk replied, a well dressed fellow, whom I recognized as a clerk in one of the nearby grocery stores, ordered fricassee of chicken wings and coffee.

That was my cue. The grocery clerk came at the psychological moment. When I secured my order, the white coated clerk said, "There is your scrapidge sandwich. The food was tempting. There was a big cup of coffee, two slices of toast and an abundance of fricasee chicken. I mean by an abundance, all that I cared to eat.

Eating House Crowded.

The chicken was of good quality and so was the potato which was served with it. I was also given two buns and one piece of butter. I sat down and ate my luncheon with a relish.

The little place was crowded with men in all walks of life, but very few ordered more than I, which caused me to believe that their pocket books were also slim.

My check was twenty cents. I was surprised and also satisfied. I decided at this point to return to my room for a while and take a much needed rest. The food for a good lodging was not an easy one and had tired me.

After two hours' sleep I went down to Scollay square. The sidewalks on the boards, offering the motion pictures to me to call the time I went into one and for a nickel enjoyed a good show. The pictures were of a high order.

Again I found myself in the surging mass of humanity that throngs the streets in that busy section of the city. It was past 6 o'clock and I decided to be thrifty. I have a habit of never eating dinner, or supper as some call it, for a man who is about to be his most enjoyable meal, the work of the day is over and there is a certain degree of pleasure eating this meal that one does not enjoy at any other meals. I accordingly decided to try some place where I could hear a little music and where I could spend at least an hour before returning to my room.

As I walked rather aimlessly about I found myself in front of the Kaiserhof on Hanover street. This is a German restaurant. As I stood outside I heard the strains of an orchestra. It sounded good.

I was rather shy at first about going in, but read a sign in the window which gave the price of a special lunch as thirty-five cents. Naturally I figured that the place must have a menu quite reasonable. I entered and ordered a table in the far end of the room. The cafe was for men only. Most of the tables were filled.

The place was fitted up in excellent style and as I looked at a yellow covered menu I gasped. A big man who sat at an opposite table was devouring a porterhouse steak, lettuce salad, stein of ale and German fried potatoes. I figured out what his check would be and I gasped again. The bill would be $1.35. Certainly this fellow was not worrying over the high cost of living and it was certain that he was not at all interested in the subject.

Gets Two Boiled Eggs.

The waiter who came over to me spread a napkin over my knees, gave me a glass of ice water and then asked me what I would have. I ordered two boiled eggs and a cup of tea. I had discovered that I could make this purchase with twenty cents. The eggs were of fine quality and also the tea. I was given two slices of German rye bread and two pieces of butter. The service was good so that when I had finished, I had not only had all I cared for but was glad to sit for more than a half an hour and hear the music. By going into this place I not only ate a fairly good meal for a little money, but also spent considerable time on the amusement end of it. Had I gone on the street directly after the meal I would have probably spent money foolishly. I had purchased early in the afternoon two cigars at 6 cents each. I had one left and after finishing a Boston AMERICAN went to my room to read and enjoy a smoke.

I retired early, and after a good night's rest arose at 7:30. I sought breakfast and also a morning paper. I asked a newsboy down in Scollay square where I could get a good, but cheap breakfast. He directed me to Gridley's place in what is known as Pie alley.

Bread and Coffee for 8 Cents.

I found more than a hundred men eating there and ordered beans and coffee with bread. The check was eight cents. It was all good, too. This is without doubt the most economical place to eat which can be found in Boston. I was perfectly satisfied with what I had. I then figured up what I had spent in the previous twenty-four hours and prepared the following table:

Luncheon	.20
Cigars	.12
Dinner	.20
Movies	.10
Papers	.02
Breakfast	.08
Room	.28
Total	$1.00

It will be seen that I had not desired I could have cut this total. The cigars and motion picture show swelled the total of my day's expenses materially. I had, though, the pleasure while I was above the ordinary man, or the man who gets $10 a week or more.

Lynn Woman Puts Burglar to Rout in Hand-to-Hand Fight

Mrs. Annie Dellcoeder, a young woman living at No. 5 Lewis street place, Lynn, made a single-handed fight against a robber who entered her bedroom early today, and after knocking the intruder over the head, forced him to leap through a window to the floor below, escaping by the fire escape. It was past 6 o'clock and the fight was quite vigorous. Mrs. Dellcoeder's apartment on the first floor of the home is partitioned and arrived on the scene in time to see the robber's back as he disappeared through the window.

Mrs. Dellcoeder was awakened by a loud noise and on looking over her, discovered a man standing over her.

Mrs. Dellcoeder made out that the fellow was short, but thickset, and quite a stronge looking individual. He wore a cap, the peaked drawn from under a slouch hat. He was dark-complexioned and wore dark clothing.

What's in a Name? But Quadruplets Make a Difference

Seems to be easy enough to name babies, judging by letters to the AMERICAN on the Seeley quadruplets.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Seeley are reported to be in a bit of a quandary for names for their four girl babies, quadruplets at that, who are now nine days old in their incubator at Dorchester Cottage Hospital.

The AMERICAN suggested yesterday that names be offered. The following letters have resulted already:

Editor AMERICAN—Easy enough to name the Seeley quadruplets. Name 'em alphabetically, the Initial indicating the respective age. For instance, give them these four names in order—Annie, Betty, Carrie, Dorothy. Annie is for the first-born of the "quads" and Dorothy for the last of course.

Auld Lang Subjob.

Roxbury.

Editor AMERICAN—A wonderful thing is the birth of four girl babies to Mrs. Seeley, which all health and happiness to mother and babies. Let the ladies' names suggest the qualities every girl and woman needs. I suggest these names—Faith, Hope, Charity, Patience. With these four in the home no mother need fear for her daughters.

Mrs. A. S. Rihard.

Editor AMERICAN — Quadruplets should be named as nearly alike as possible. For the Seeley "quads," what is the matter with these four names? Angeline, Adeline, Evangeline, Madeline?

EMMELINE C.

Jamaica Plain.

Editor AMERICAN — The Seeley quadruplet girls should be named alphabetically in order. Would these four names be acceptable to the happy parents: Alfreda, Bettina, Carolina, Dorian? There are endless combinations of girls' names in alphabetical order, but these four please my ear.

MEDFORD MOTHER.

WANTED—A NAME? NO, FOUR OF 'EM

What shall the Seeley girl quadruplets be named? They are now known as Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4. They are nine days old today.

Who will suggest suitable names for them?

POLICE HUNTING WOMAN IN HAVERHILL SHOOTING

age, five feet five inches tall, with a wealth of black hair. Her eyes were large and black and she was decidedly good looking. She was dressed in white and wore a large picture hat.

The engagement of Nickerson to Miss Sherwood closely followed the settlement of the $20,000 breach of promise suit brought by Margaret Love, a chorus girl of Boston. This was settled out of court.

Miss Love, it is known, has been in Haverhill since last Friday. She has eaten at Willett's cafe on Main street several times. Nickerson takes meals there frequently.

Miss Love came to Boston late yesterday afternoon, went to the Hotel Brewster, used the pay-station telephone and left the hotel. It is believed she is still in Boston.

A love affair is believed to lie at the bottom of the shooting. The engagement of Mr. Nickerson and Miss Sherwood is thought by the police to have been the immediate cause of the shooting.

The greatest excitement prevailed in the offices of the gas company following the shooting, but the clerks and other assistants were cautioned to keep the matter quiet and a patrolman was put allowed to enter the private office. The young woman who did the shooting passed out before him unhindered, stepped into an automobile and was whirled away down Merrimac street.

Mr. Nickerson left himself immediately after the excitement had subsided and went to Rye Beach.

Oddly enough, it is George W. Sherwood, an uncle of Miss Sherwood—though Mr. Nickerson probably never knew of the relationship—who tells the principal story of the case. Mr. Sherwood, who is an engineer in a building across the street, said:

I had been at work in the basement repairing a boiler, and was on my way to a hotel nearby and was passing through the alleyway between the rear of the office and the hotel when I heard a noise like the sputtering of an automobile. I thought it was Tom Nickerson cranking his auto, which he keeps in the alleyway, and paid no attention to it, but then came a second report and a third.

I knew then it couldn't be an automobile, and I went in by the rear door to the gas company's office and found two of the employes struggling with a young woman, well dressed and apparently twenty-four years old. Each had hold of her wrists and she was holding a bulldog revolver in her right hand and grasping the barrel of it with her left. There was some blood on her hands, and I thought it might have come from her cutting a finger on the trigger.

One of the employes came up to me and threatened to throw me out. I said, "If you believe I haven't nerve enough to take that revolver away from her I will," and I started to go in and do so.

Just then G. N. G. Nichols, the ex-city solicitor and a close friend of Nickerson, came in, brushed past me, went up to the woman and took the revolver away from her. After that I went out and returned to work.

About two hours later, though, I saw Mr. Nickerson cranking up his car in the alley. His right hand was done up with bandages, and he was cranking the machine with his left.

Last Winter Miss Margaret Love of Boston, who was a chorus girl in the "Arcadians" Company, brought suit against Nickerson for $20,000 for alleged breach of promise. Miss Love charged that mutual agreement of marriage existed, and although she had been willing to become Nickerson's bride, he had not redeemed his promise. She engaged a Boston lawyer and attachments were placed on Nickerson's holdings in the Haverhill Gas Light Company and in the Boston Storage Warehouse Company.

At the time the suit was filed Mr. Nickerson denied the charges in toto. "Their falsity will be shown at the proper time," he said. Henry F. Hurlburt was retained as his counsel. Later it was reported that a substantial settlement in favor of Miss Love was made, and the case did not come to trial.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The authorities in a number of villages just over the New Hampshire line are busy these days swelling the funds of the town treasury by arresting motorists for speeding. The Touring Club of America has had so many complaints from unsuspecting motorists who have been obliged to contribute that it has sent out a warning. Speedtraps are in active operation at Smithtown, Seabrook and Hampton Falls, N. H. At Seabrook, just north of Newburyport, the authorities are especially active.

"John & Arthur," the Boylston street accessory dealers, who are agents for the Disco starting and lighting equipment, announce that the Ignition Starter Company has closed a deal for a plant in Detroit that will give them 100,000 square feet of factory floor space with thoroughly modern equipment. The new Disco electric starter has a separate motor and generator which will give the motorist the satisfaction of making his own current for lights and starting system as well as for ignition.

In the mimic war in Connecticut the motor truck is having a practical tryout as a vehicle for the transport of goods and various other army uses. In these evolutions the Blue Army has its entire field outfit for 10,000 men and officers loaded upon seventeen or eighteen motor trucks of various sizes, and capacities—mostly of the one and one-half and three ton type. The equipment includes nearly all of the standard makes of trucks, the White Company of Cleveland sending with two five-ton, two three-ton, three one and one-half-ton and two fifteen hundred-pound trucks, the latter two being used as ambulances.

Reports were received that all of the White fleet were successful in "delivering the goods" to the militiamen's encampments which were scattered all over the territory covered by the war zone.

Through bottomless clay, alkali mud and gullies that were a succession of steep four-foot descents and sharp rises, the Transcontinental Aleo truck reported at Wamsutter, Wyoming, with a mileage record of 2,720 miles. Word comes from the crew that weather and road conditions encountered by the truck were the worst in fourteen years in the State. Ten cloudbursts in eight days washed away a number of bridges and the whole country between Medicine Bow and Hanna was under two feet of water. At one place a section of railroad track was washed out for a mile.

ASTOR BABY BOY THRIVES

afternoon when Mrs. William Force and Mr. Force, parents of Mrs. Astor, were summoned to the Fifth avenue mansion, but the accouchement was delayed for many hours.

Shortly before the birth of the child Mrs. Astor was removed from the room which she had been occupying since her arrival in New York to a larger and more commodious one on the second floor.

Dr. Cragin has been in constant attendance upon Mrs. Astor since the week before last. In making official announcement of the birth Dr. Cragin said that the baby, as well as Mrs. Astor, was in excellent condition. At the same time Dr. Cragin said that he did not look for any complications, but that he expected the young mother and her baby to continue doing well.

There has been considerable fear among the relatives of Mrs. Astor as to the outcome of the accouchement because of her physical sufferings and mental stress resulting from the disaster to the Titanic.

May Be Settled Out of Court.

Unusual interest from the social, financial and legal viewpoints attaches to the status of the new child. There is a possibility that the birth of the boy may mean a legal contest for the redistribution of the $150,000,000 Astor estate. Under the terms of the Astor will the sum of $3,000,000 was set aside for each child born other than the children, Vincent and Muriel, of whom Mrs. Ava Willing Astor is the mother.

The legal question involved is whether or not the language of this provision of the bill is to be construed as a provision for the new heir—that is to say a specific provision. Lawyers differ as to the answer of the question. There has at various times come the information purporting to be from the inside of the family councils that no contest is to be made, because such a step will be rendered unnecessary by a friendly settlement out of court, in which a larger share of the Astor estate than the $3,000,000 set aside under the general provision will be given the new child. If such an agreement has been reached, the details have not been made public.

Layette Cost Over $2,000.

The new baby had a stock of baby's clothes ready for him that would delight a whole congress of mothers. The little wardrobe represented an outlay of more than $2,000 for the essentials alone, not much of the embroidery on the dainty little garments was the handiwork of the young mother.

Much of the flimsy, fluffy raiment was imported from a Paris dealer, and the best experts in New York worked for months upon some of the dainty things in which Baby Astor will coo his winning way into the world of fashion and finance.

The baby is fifth of the name. John Jacob Astor the first was born in 1763, the second in 1794, the third in 1822. Colonel John Jacob Astor, father of the present owner of the name, was the fourth to bear the name of the founder of the family fortune.

The youngest Astor began life in a $10,000 nursery, the costliest ever known on the avenue.

Early in the day there was an unusual crowd in front of the Astor mansion in Fifth avenue and in Central Park opposite, drawn by the fact that the girl-widow did not take her accustomed automobile airing yesterday, and the idea that the stork had arrived was strengthened by the signs of activity about the home.

That the child was a boy was a matter of intense satisfaction to Mrs. Astor and her family. Mrs. Astor long ago announced to friends that she hoped it would be a boy to bear the name of her husband, Vincent Astor was until today the only son of Colonel Astor, and there was none to dispute with the new arrival the name of his father.

The young mother, a few days ago sent down word to waiting reporters that she preferred to be referred to as Mrs. John Jacob Astor, instead of Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor. The arrival of a male child, it is said, may further strengthen the already rivalry between the girl-widow and Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, divorced wife of Colonel Astor, now in Europe. Mrs. Ava Willing Astor announced that she will here after be known as Mrs. John Astor. Had little John Jacob Astor been one of twins, or even of triplets, each child, by the Astor will, would have received $3,000,000.

CORSICAN HELD UP BY FOG; FEAR INJURY MAY BE DANGEROUS

MONTREAL, Aug. 14.—Fear that the Allan Line steamship Corsican, which rammed an iceberg off the coast of Newfoundland Monday, is more seriously damaged than was first reported, was caused here today by receipt of a radiotelegram from Captain Cook of that vessel, which stated that she was practically in the same position as when she struck and that the steamer Lake Champlain is standing by.

The wireless stated that the fog is very thick.

The Corsican is in latitude 52.24 north and longitude 52.15 west, or one hundred and twenty miles east of Belle Isle. The message did not say whether or not the five hundred persons on board the Corsican had been transferred.

SAFE HERE AFTER PERIL AT SEA

usually high tide at 9.30 Monday night, after she had proceeded two miles out Yarmouth harbor from her dock.

Many passengers were asleep at the time. The big coaster grounded so gently that only a few passengers were aware of anything unusual till the next morning.

Tuesday morning the passengers were assured that there wasn't the slightest bit of danger. At 10 a. m. (high tide) a vigorous but unsuccessful effort was made to float the big ship. When that failed the transfer of passengers to the Prince Arthur began. The latter vessel was standing by.

The transfer was made easily. A tug was moored alongside a lower gangway. Passengers walked on the tug and were conveyed to the Prince Arthur. When all the 120 passengers had been safely transferred, the Prince Arthur kept on to Boston. No passengers went ashore, though it was first reported that several had done so.

Woman Passenger's Story.

Miss Reta Power of Waterville, Nova Scotia, a passenger on the Prince George, said:

"Most of the passengers had left the deck and gone below. The evening was very chilly and unless one was warmly dressed, it was not comfortable on deck.

"I was standing on the deck, however, with two or three others when we heard the engine room bells jingle loudly, and the engines were reversed. Then we felt the vessel stop and her stern rise slightly in the air.

"The shock was almost imperceptible, however.

"Forward we could make out the sail of a little schooner in the darkness. We did not see any lights on her. We heard afterward that it was to avoid colliding with this schooner that Captain McKinnon had backed his vessel into the mud."

Other passengers of the Prince George that landed today from the Prince Arthur were Mrs. F. W. Hilger and eleven-months-old daughter Margaret from Yonkers, N. Y., and the Misses Margaret and Amelia Hennessey of Boston.

The Trip to California Under Special Care

"You feel like sorting out and tying together the memories of this trip and keeping them separate from all other trips." A woman recently said this after a pleasant experience on a Burlington Route Through Tourist Car Excursion party to California. She traveled alone, but met many agreeable people on the car, which was in charge of a special conductor. This good-natured official was a well-informed, courteous man, who went all the way through with the party, looking after everyone's comfort and attending to all the little details of the trip. Plan a woman or child in one of these parties can travel with perfect safety and freedom from care. If you would like to know more about the Burlington's comfortable and inexpensive, personally conducted excursions, please write me a postal and I'll send you rates, booklets, pictures, etc., by return mail. RED SOX RILEY'S COLUMN PILGRIMS

WHEN your own errant son goes off to war you have one hope that buoys you up—that the lad will be killed, and that by his death in behalf of his country he will partially—partially, only, mind you—expiate the misdeeds that have brought your gray hairs in sorrow almost to the grave. Because of your mother love, which, poets say, flourishes throughout all such misadventures, or your father love, which, blacksmiths say, lends additional power to that strong right arm of yours, you still have one hope which clings to your heart just as persistently as the moss clings to the stone—that the kid will be killed and you won't have to worry about him any more. Besides, perhaps, he won't be shot in the back.

TO such kind fate do we hereby consign the Boston Pilgrims—the errant tail-end children of the National League.

THEY went away last night—bless 'em! And here's hoping they never come back. We coddled 'em, and we coaxed 'em and we did all in our power to save 'em from what was coming to 'em. And the more we coddled, and the more we coaxed, and the more we did for 'em the worse they got. They are bound for —well, somewhere, and here's hoping they get there quick. After which they won't worry us any more.

* * *

SOME frivolous individual, fresh from Maine, called us up last night to ask us about the Pilgrim score. It sounded like a voice from the grave. We told the lad that the score was 4 to 2 in favor of the Cubs. He asked, serious-like:

"Is that all?"

We answered, serious-like:

"Yes, that's all." Strangely enough, it WAS all. We might have said 20 to 14, but that would be the story of another day—almost any other day, in fact.

Whereupon, like the sorrowful mother and the grouchy father, he probably went and laid down to sleep.

Hereafter, whoever asks what the Boston National score is will be encouraged to consult some other authority. Knowing full well that said authority will not be bothered much.

WE regret to say that said questioner called the Boston AMERICAN once more thereafter and asked:

"Where do the Pilgrims go from here and when do they come back?"

And the answer was:

"They're going away—a long distance away—the farther they go the better. And when they come back, nobody knows. We have a paid-up life insurance policy, so it makes no difference."

NEWSPAPER life is sometimes discouraging. You have to take those things. A baseball writer would be a failure if he couldn't tell you how badly the Pilgrims, or the Braves, or the Somerville Giants, or any other old champions, were beaten on the thirty-third of June, 1847, off hand, just like that.

BEFORE they went away the Pilgrims did the best they could to offset the slight penalty that the New York Giants have over the Chicago Cubs, accomplishing in their own small way all that they could in overcoming the Giants' advantage in the way of umpiring the great national game. Thus, the Cubs today are only six games behind the Giants.

DISPOSING thus of the pessimistic side of life, we may rise to a higher altitude and have a glimpse at the silver lining. The Red Sox begin today a series at home which will last, with one brief intermission, until Labor Day. They play the Browns a double-header today. They will begin this long sojourn at home eight full games ahead of the Washington Senators, who were beaten 5 to 3 by the Chicago White Sox yesterday. Those persons who were inclined to the belief that the Washington Senators would probably drive the Boston Red Sox out of their place are advised to look into past copies of the Boston AMERICAN, where they will find the oft-recurring suggestion that the Philadelphia Athletics will be the real contenders at the finish. After which, if they consult the standing, they will discover that the world's champions are only 9½ games to the bad and are still coming.

BILL SWEENEY hit twice safely in three at bat yesterday. He was hit by a pitched ball and struck out once. On the latter occasion, Umpire Rigler called a third strike that looked a trifle outside of the plate and Bill kicked. Heinie Zimmerman, his successor in the National League championship, hit safely twice in four appearances, one of his efforts being a two-bagger. He took his two hits off "Hub" Perdue. George Tyler struck out the National League "batting king." Zim overlooked the third one altogether and was called out.

FRANK SCHULTE, whose usual home run was long overdue, slipped his first four bagger in the Boston series into the bleachers in the sixth inning, scoring Archer ahead of him. Speaker followed with a double and Stanley's single to center. Tyler struck out the National League "batting king." Zim overlooked the third one altogether and was called out.

THAT sixth inning, with Schulte's home run, Zimmerman's double and Saier's triple, relieved the worried-to-death Frank Chance. But for those three clouts the score would have been tied. Three hits in a row in the second produced the other two for the Cubs. The Pilgrims squeezed out one in the first from McDonald's double and Sweeney's base hit, and another in the eighth by dint of singles by Johnson and Titus and Devlin's out. Down to Saier.

THIS Saier is gradually blossoming into one of the best of the Cubs. He is a clean-limbed young fellow, who is a sure catch at first base, a clean and reliable batter and a clever, speedy base runner. He has shown more improvement than any two of other new Cubs, is clearly of championship material and, if he improves the way he has since Frank Chance took up the bench, will some day outclass Fred Merkle, who is Johnny McGraw's own particular pet.

PILGRIMS HIKING INTO THE WEST

The Pilgrims are traveling today in the West where they open up their first game on the Western circuit in St. Louis tomorrow afternoon. They will be on the road until Labor Day, when they will open their final home series at Walpole street with the Giants.

The Cubs finished up their work begun last week, by taking the last game of the series yesterday. The victory was virtually handed to them, as the Pilgrims played like a bunch of amateurs at times, by throwing the ball around in haphazard fashion.

"Hub" Perdue was hit safely on an average of only one to an inning for seven innings, but these hits included Schulte's clout into the outfield bleachers, Saier's long triple and a double by Zimmerman.

There were also many heavy wallops that happened to go straight to the fielders, notably those that Schulte and Zimmerman drove out to Titus. And the safe hits were bunched.

Tyler finished the game in good form after "Rub" had given way to a pinch hitter who could not pinch hit.

Red Sox Are Among Big Money Makers

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Men prominent in big league baseball councils here declare that the present year will be a lean one for several of the major clubs, although none of them are likely actually to lose money.

The big money-makers will be, as usual, the New York Nationals, Boston Red Sox, both Chicago clubs, the Pittsburgs, Washington and Athletics. It is estimated that the Giants will yield nearly $250,000 in profits.

The Boston Red Sox have done a phenomenal business at home and abroad and expect to show a net profit of $200,000. Estimates on some of the other clubs are as follows:

Chicago Americans, $175,000; Chicago Nationals, $150,000; Pittsburgh, $100,000; Washington, $100,000; Brooklyn, $50,000.

Were it not for the fifty per cent. division of paid admissions at all major league parks some of the unsuccessful clubs would sustain heavy losses.

Maloney Is Returned to Brockton Club

BROCKTON, Aug. 14.—Pat Maloney, who was sold to the New York Highlanders by the local New England League club several weeks ago, has been returned to Brockton by Harry Wolverton. Maloney was one of the most promising players ever developed in the New England League.

This young outfielder had a batting average of over .400, while his fielding and base running were of the sensational nature. He was recently injured in Gotham and this prevented him from making good in his new berth.

"Klondike" Smith has been sent to the Yankees to take Maloney's place. He is a very hard hitter and a grand fielder.

Pitchers Must Keep Cool During Game

Pitchers, to be successful, must keep cool and collected during every stage of a battle. The moment they get a trifle frustrated or winded they are liable to grow unsteady. Often a twirler, when at bat, drives out a long hit, a triple or a home run. He races around the bases as fast as he can make his legs wiggle. A few moments later he is likely to be on the mound again, hurling to his opponents.

Then, if ever, he has a tendency to weaken if his rivals can get the jump on him. For his nerves are still tingling with the long sprint, and unless he is a Marathoner his wind isn't on fresh as it was the inning before.

If he is wise and believes he is a bit wabbly he will resort to all sorts of tricks to delay the pastime until he recovers. His teammates help him out all they can. But even then he's likely to walk or hit a man, or somebody may nail a base hit. Before he can recover all the good pitching which has gone before is liable to be wasted.

Some clever infielders, when they get a pitcher on first, can run him until he's all peppered out. They let him get a good lead off the bag and then trap him between the bases.

By fast work in passing the ball back and forth they can chase him until the twirler is almost ready to drop in his tracks. Unless he is a mass of iron he cannot work the next round as steadily as before. Then often the batter who has put him fouls off a couple of balls, giving the hit-and-run sign, and get him winded before he's realized what he is doing.

MRS. SPEAKER IS RED SOX MASCOT

Jake Stahl and his great band of Red Sox have a new official mascot. The Speed Boys' latest good-luck-bringer isn't a man or a boy, either.

The name of the mascot is Mrs. Speaker, the mother of the mighty Tris whose sensational playing both in the field, on the bases and at the bat, has done more than anything else to keep the Red Sox at the head of the American League.

Mrs. Speaker has been with the team for over a week. She joined the pennant chasers just before they left St. Louis and she has inspired the players with a fighting spirit which is sure to enable them to hold their own with Clark Griffith's stalwart band of Senators and Connie Mack's seasoned array of world's champions.

Mrs. Speaker knew very little about baseball before Tris was purchased by the Red Sox for $3000. She had attended only a few games and had made several unsuccessful attempts to have her boy retire from the national pastime.

Studied the Game.

But when Mrs. Speaker realized that her son was determined to follow baseball as a profession, she studied the game as one would a lesson in English, German or French, and the result is that she is now versed in many of the fine points of the pastime.

She has been rather fortunate in having one of the ablest balltossers in the world as a teacher, in the person of her son, who is known to every "fan" in the country as plain every day "Spoke."

Mrs. Speaker has a beautiful home in Texas, but would rather be with the Red Sox squad so that she can be near her boy. She is rooting hard for the Sox to win the pennant and the world's championship, because Tris is a member of the team.

She did not believe that the Speed Boys had a chance to win the flag at the first of the season, but when the team took the lead away from the White Sox she got busy and Stahl's new club was off on the wonderful showing of her son and Stahl's new club even better, which turned out to be true.

The Red Sox won the majority of their games from the White Sox on the last trip West, but the fielding had been raised and the pitching none too good. The team then went to St. Louis and failed to play brilliant baseball.

Jinx Disappears.

Mrs. Speaker then joined her son and the jinx immediately disappeared. The Sox began to play like real champions. They had been winning consistently before Mrs. Speaker arrived, but not in decisive fashion.

The woman from the Lone Star State put new fight into the players and Tris Speaker in particular, and he has since played sensational ball in Cleveland and Detroit.

They beat the Naps in three out of three games while they tied the Forest City aggregation in other games. In Detroit, Stahl's men did even better, winning three out of four games.

Mrs. Speaker will remain with the team for some time to come and the men are confident that she will prove a good mascot. Little Joey McCarthy will, of course, still continue to hold down his job, but for the time being he will have to be content to watch "Spoke ma" carry off the lion's share of the glory.

STAR CARD OF BOUTS FOR FANS AT PILGRIM A. A. TONIGHT

WALSH RULES THE FAVORITE OVER BRANNIGAN

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE will be a double attraction at the Pilgrim A. A. tonight. Jimmy Walsh, one of the best boxers of his weight in the ring today, will clash with Patsey Brannigan of Pittsburgh in a twelve-round contest, while the "fans" will also be given an opportunity to see the pictures of the Welgast-Rivers lightweight championship bout which took place at Vernon, Cal., on the Fourth of July.

PILGRIM A. A. PROGRAM.

Jimmy Walsh vs. Patsy Brannigan.

Gilbert Gallant vs. Bat Terry.

Joe Nelson vs. George Robinson.

Pictures of Welgast and Rivers bout, Pilgrim A. A.

Walsh and Brannigan should put up a fast bout. Both boys are clever boxers and as fast as lightning on their feet. Jimmy isn't a very hard hitter, but he is able to score repeatedly with his left and right hands.

The local pride's last appearance in this city was against Johnny Kilbane last spring. The featherweight champion had all he could do to hold Walsh on even terms. Jimmy is in grand condition for the fray and is confident that he will win in decisive fashion.

There are few boxers in the game who are able to enter a ring on shorter notice than Walsh. He takes excellent care of his physical condition, and is never in what could be called poor shape. Eddie Keevin's battler has been spending the Summer at Brant Rock and is as hard as nails. He has been giving boxing lessons at Powder Point School, Duxbury, and has passed away many a pleasant hour on fishing trips.

Brannigan comes to this city with a fine record. He has met some of the leading bantamweights and featherweights in the country and has usually done well. Wally rules a favorite in betting circles.

CONSIDERABLE interest is being manifested in the pictures of the Welgast-Rivers bout. This was one of the most sensational lightweight battles ever staged on California soil. It marked Welgast's return to the ring after an absence of a year which was caused by an operation which he had to undergo for appendicitis.

Both Welgast and Rivers fought like wild cats. They jabbed and jolted each other for twelve rounds with Rivers having a slight shade, in the thirteenth round the battling was fast and furious. Suddenly the champion started after his man like a wounded lioness and landed some terrific blows. Rivers tottered, but as he fell he let go several hard smashes which sent Welgast to the mat in a heap. Referee Jack Welsh sided the Cadillac fighter to his feet and gave him the verdict of a foul. He asserted after the bout that the Mexican hit Al below the belt.

The "fans" at the ringside were dumfounded at Welsh's decision. Hundreds of them claimed that it was Welgast and not Rivers who delivered the foul blow. It is said that the pictures of the fight are good ones and New England followers of the manly art will be able to decide for themselves whether Welgast or Rivers should have been declared the victor after seeing the pictures of the big Coast bout tonight.

THE semi-final bout of the evening between Gilbert Gallant of Chelsea and Battling Terry of Newcastle should be a spirited affair. Terry has a good record, while Gallant has yet to lose a referee's decision. He has been performing in gilt-edged style since he has been in the same "stable" with Matty Baldwin.

Joe Nelson of Lawrence and George Robinson, the Cambridge negro, should put up a slugging match with the chances in favor of Nelson. Robinson is a hard-hitter, but he is liable to seek a soft spot in the first or fourth round.

Mack Still Has Hopes of Landing 1912 Pennant

By BILL BAILEY.

Connie Mack, the elongated gent who tells the world's champions when to play the hit and run, the sacrifice and a few other things, declines positively, vehemently, persistently and insistently to throw the sponge in the air and admit that his lads are out of that American League pennant race.

If you put on a black mask and muck a large gun under the lean nose of the manager he might admit that things looked a bit serious. But he wouldn't go much stronger than that.

Does he say that his fellows will win? He does not. He simply answers that they have a chance and then enumerates reasons why that chance should be nursed into a hope.

You know Connie isn't one to bosst. He came through here last year and it was merely a question of a few days and games until he would clinch and pennant. "Congratulations," said one of his friends.

"Looks like you had it nailed down again."

"Well, if the pitchers keep pitching the way they have and if the fellows don't have a batting slump and if the fielders don't get to fooling around and there we have a little luck and no injuries, we stand a fair chance of winning," was the answer.

About a week later he clinched it.

If he was persistent in refusing to admit that he had the pennant won he is just as confident that his men be counted in the running until the other fellow clinches it.

"We are in this hunt and I think it's going to be a pretty interesting race from now on," said the boss of the world's champions.

"Well, we are playing better ball right now than we have at any time this season. I might say that we are playing a stronger game than we have in two years. When we were rolling right along last year and the season before we played no better baseball than we have in our recent games."

"But the handicap?"

"It certainly is a big one. Yet it can be overcome. The Boston and Washington teams are setting the pace. As the race reaches the end the strain will be all the more severe.

"We are in the golden spot. We have been there and know what it means. Our fellows will be playing just as effectively if the fight becomes red hot as they are now. We have been through that mill and the experience we gained will do us much good.

"Just a little losing streak on the part of the other fellows and some games won by us and we would be right within striking distance.

Man Who Put the Curve in Baseball Discovered

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The identity of the man who discovered the curve ball has been found at last. According to Professor W. S. Franklin of Lehigh University his name was Daniel Bernoulli. The master of letters made this declaration in a lecture delivered at Columbia University yesterday before a large and enthusiastic audience of baseball lovers.

Bernoulli was a Swiss physicist, who died in 1782. He found out how to throw a ball so that it would curve. Joe Wood, Rube Marquard, Christy Mathewson, Walter Johnson and the other star box men of the present decade owe a great deal to this ancient Swiss.

Professor Franklin explained all to his audience but not in terms of baseballs. He used pails of water, boats, tin disks and enough of an assortment to fill a hardware store, but in the end every one was convinced that Bernoulli was the only original when it came to plotting out a curved ball. Some dyed in the wool rooters thought Dr. Franklin should have had one of the big league pitchers for the day to give a demonstration, but Dr. Franklin demonstrated very ably without the assistance of a professional.

The whole secret of a curved ball lies in the relation of the pressure to the velocity and vice versa, each ball creating its own pressure by the velocity and the spin that the pitcher gives it as it leaves his hand.

Bernoulli made the discovery of this fact when he was observing a stream of water that flowed through wide pools and narrow shoals. In the pools he soon found that the pressure was very great while the velocity was almost nothing; in the shoals he saw that the velocity was very swift, while the pressure had almost disappeared.

This is the principle, so Professor Franklin demonstrated, that governs the flight and curve of a ball. If the ball sails straight through the air with no spin the air is pushed aside equally in all directions and the ball is directly under the control of gravity so far as its curve is concerned and it soon falls to the ground. Whereas if the front of the ball, as it leaves the pitcher's hand, is given a downward spin, there is in addition to the straight forcing aside of the air a circulation motion of the air around the ball. This motion being over and then under the ball, tends to increase the speed with which the air passes beneath the ball and retards it above the ball.

Then reverting to the pressure-velocity theory of Bernoulli, it is seen that the pressure increases above the ball with the diminution of the velocity and decreases below with the increase of velocity and consequently the ball "drops." Likewise if the spinning motion of the front of the ball is upward the pressure increases below and diminishes above and the pitch is an "up shoot." Exactly the same theory applies when the spinning is to the right or left.

SAILOR WHITE PUT ANDY MORRIS AWAY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 14.—Andy Morris of Boston was knocked out in the tenth round of a bout scheduled for fifteen by Sailor White of New York at the Mascrella A. C. here.

Morris appeared to be out of condition.

Big Purses Up for Charter Oak Races

HARTFORD, Ct., Aug. 14.—To the eight Grand Circuit purses already offered at Charter Oak Park in connection with the big Connecticut fair, opening on Labor Day and continuing to the end of the week, in which $25,000 is offered, the management of the big fair will add seven other popular open class races for which $1,000 purses will be given, making a grand total of $32,000 in purses. This is for the purpose of making a full five-day schedule of light harness racing, the best ever seen on the American tracks.

No park or track in the world is more popular than the ancient, historic Charter Oak. It is the oldest member of the Grand Circuit and some of the most noted events in the history of horseracing have taken place there. There are on record today hundreds of sensational finishes between the speediest trotting and pacing horses ever seen in some of the famous $10,000 Charter Oak and Nutmeg State stakes.

BIKE SPEEDERS IN HOUR RACE

Another hour race is on the card at the Revere cycle track for Saturday night, and as the distance has been an exceptionally attractive one for the crowd, there is every reason to believe that the coming event will produce the usual keen competition that has characterized the racing this season.

Clarence Carman, the plucky and speedy youngster from Newark will be in the front rank, for he has about all the one-hour race honors of the season at the beach track. He is first to be defeated at that distance at Revere, and having been challenged he will have to ride on Saturday night.

George Wiley, James F. Moran, Menus Bedell and other riders have challenged him, but all have been defeated. The latest challenger is Elmer Collins of Lynn and the American champion is confident that he will take Carman's measure.

Collins was always a good man for an hour race, and being a hardened veteran he can stand the long road at a fast clip. It is merely a question of getting accustomed to the change of air from that of France to this country, and as he is in fine condition physically he can be depended upon to soon come into his own.

Jimmy Moran of Chelsea was yesterday signed to ride the race, and in order that only the cream of the path start Wiley will be the fourth man and his contract will probably come from Newark today.

ENGLISH BEAT AMERICANS.

SITTING BOURNE, England, Aug. 14.—The Philadelphia cricket club team was defeated by 132 runs in a match against J. R. Tilden's eleven, which includes several first-class cricketers.

The Philadelphia players scored 73 runs in the first innings, and 153 in the second, making a total of 226. The score of the home team was 358.

The top scorers on the visiting team were George Conyers, who made 31 runs, and J. L. Evans, who obtained 29.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—A Paris horse dealer, acting for J. E. Widener, the millionaire American turfman, paid $20,000 at Deauville for a yearling colt, Mont d'Or, son of Val d'Or Lopellness. This is a record price for a yearling in France.

Sharkey Now Enters 'White Hope' Brigade

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—"Sailor Tom" Sharkey, once a leading heavyweight pugilist, with a record of standing twenty-five rounds before Jim Jeffries and giving the then champion one of the hardest battles of his career, announced himself as a contender for the white heavyweight championship of the world.

"Sharkey looks to gain this distinction after a long period of retirement by taking the measure of Tommy Burns, whose defeat by Jack Johnson gave the latter the world's title.

Sharkey says he has been lead to believe that Burns wants a return match with Johnson, and expresses his own willingness to arrange a match with Burns "under any fair conditions the latter may name."

He expresses confidence that if he takes a course in strict training he can re-enter the ring and defeat Burns.

JOE PATCHEN II. THE FAVORITE

FORT ERIE, Ont., Aug. 14.—The features of today's Grand Circuit program is the $5,000 stake for 2:12 pacers, which is expected to prove another victory for the unbeaten Joe Patchen II., who has won six straight races this season without the loss of a heat.

The meet here opened yesterday with a big attendance. Four stirring races were witnessed, three going to the favorites. The track was fast and one hour made a fine mark and another equaled his record.

The feature was the King George V. stake, $5,000 for the 2:12 trotters. It resulted in an upset, and Esther W., winner of the Tavern "Steak" at Cleveland, beat the race to Baden, a brown stallion by Blagara. Five heats were trotted to get a winner.

Doctor Mack, favorite in the 2:16 class trot, lost the first heat to Funny Crank, driven by Geers, the veteran reinsman. Funny Crank, a 4-year-old colt, would not get near the Doctor in the next three heats.

WOMEN ARCHERS IN SHOOT TODAY

The women archers were out in force this morning for the first national round at the Harvard Stadium in the meet of the American Association. A large number of women archers are at the meet and the competition in this event is anticipated to be very close. All of the women archers that have shown so far in the tournament have been very skillful and some good scores are bound to be registered today.

The first York round for the men will also be held this morning and in the afternoon both these rounds will be completed.

Morning and afternoon sessions will also be held on Thursday and Friday.

The first day of the archery congress was the most successful. Nineteen entries lined up for the men's shoot and thirteen women took part in the ladies' Columbia round.

G. Philip Bryant led with a total score of 1,151. He also had the good record of having made 177 hits out of 180 shots. R. P. Elmer, last years champion, ran him a close second with a total score of 1,056 and 174 hits.

In the first and second Columbia rounds for ladies, Mrs. Witwer Taylor showed that she has lost none of her prowess with the bow by leading the field with a total score of 287 and 131 hits out of 140 shots. Miss M. A. Brownell was second for the day with a score of 140 for two rounds and 128 hits. Miss J. W. Sullivan made as many hits as did Mrs. Taylor, but her score was only sufficient to land her third place, being for 639. There were thirteen entrants.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"BROTHER WILFRED and me and Sister Mayme was to a swell party the other night," said the Manicure Lady. "It was gave by an artist that has just opened a new studio, the same as the studio that I was telling you about a few weeks ago. We had a grand time."

"I think you are wrong in going to studio parties," said the Head Barber. "I have told you that before, and you know when I tell you anything I mean it."

"I can take care of myself without any bone-headed barber telling me where to get off," said the Manicure Lady, frigidly. "This artist was a perfect gent. The only thing I didn't like about the party was one of his lady guests. I think she must be one of them ladies that is all the time looking for adventures. I think they call them adventuresses, or some name like that. She hadn't no more than seen Wilfred when she started making eyes at him, because she had heard the poor kid telling that he was a poet, and I guess she thought that poets makes a lot of dough. Goodness knows they don't, George, but as long as she thought so I suppose that ain't neither here or there, but to get on with my story.

"The minute Wilfred noticed that this blonde beauty was shining up to him he swelled up like one of them poisoned nipples that you read about in the story books. I guess in the next hour after he made the flash he must have recited about seventy of his worst young poems. Don't you see, George? He was trying to make a hit with her and coo her into giving him a little dough, but he was waiting for a good chance to approach her, and all the time she was playing the same system. I had more than one good laugh there at two of them found out that there wasn't a quarter between them, and probably wouldn't be for some time to come. Wilfred was telling me on the way home that in the old days poets used to have patrons and patronesses. He said that any time a poet was on his uppers he would go and dig up some rich old guy or guyess and tell him the facts in the case are these: I think it was a pretty good system at that, George. Barbers and manicure girls can make enough to get by, but poets is awful helpless creatures. At least, Wilfred is. He has to nick the old geat's bankroll for four bits to make this studio party that I am telling you about."

"Studios don't make no bit with me," said the Head Barber.

"You ain't classy enough to understand them," said the Manicure Lady. "If you want to enjoy a studio you ought to have one of them artistic tempers, or whatever they call it."

The Making of a Pretty Girl

THE WELL-GROOMED MISS

The thoroughbred daughter of the century is always well groomed.

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer.

WHEN you wish to say in the briefest possible words that a girl is exquisitely neat, perfectly dressed and correct in all the appointments of a thoroughbred daughter of the century you speak of her as being well groomed.

Practically it means that the girl in question is most delicately fastidious in everything pertaining to her toilette and to her personality.

The well-groomed girl is found behind the counter, next to a slovenly companion; there are thousands of her in offices clicking the typewriter, you will see her on the farm, where she is so charmingly and becomingly dressed in her simple litle frocks that she stamps herself at once as well-bred, sensible and immaculately clean, no matter what sort of work she may be doing.

Of course, it is the ideal of every society girl to be known as perfectly groomed but the girl who can give all her time to the process achieves no greater success than the one who hurries out quickly in the morning to a day's work and preserves during long hours of toil that same characteristic which we recognize at once and call good grooming.

Now, the first principle of the well-groomed girl is absolute cleanliness. She takes her daily hot scrub at night as religiously as she says her prayers, and if she has little time to call her own she systematizes this time so as to get the very utmost out of it.

How much time women lose loitering about their dressing and thinking of other things while they are pretending to attend to their toilet.

Good grooming has nothing to do with makeup in any form. On the contrary, the girls in society and those in business who are preeminently well groomed show no trace of powder, paints or artifice of any kind.

This doesn't mean that they dress in a severe masculine or unbecoming manner. But it does mean that they are appropriately dressed. They do not wear laces and furbelows at the wrong time, and as far as the fastidious girl is concerned, the most expensive part of the wardrobe is that worn during the daytime, while the flimsy, inexpensive but pretty frocks are reserved for evening wear.

The well groomed girl obtains the color in her cheeks from daily exercise and from the friction of a bath brush, which she uses with her daily bath. Her hair is lustrous, soft and, above all, with never a suggestion of dandruff. Her scalp is clean and shining as her brow. She will do her hair up in the simplest way that is still becoming to her and leave elaborate coiffures for evening.

Her hands are daintiness itself, for every girl has time enough to look after her hands and nails, if she really would do.

Her boots are perfectly varnished and well fitted. If she has had a sensible mother the girl who is well groomed has been taught how to buy.

Personally, I consider this as important as how to cook, and I don't think the girl's education is complete until she is given some ideas about the value of materials used in clothing, unless she can tell good linen, wool and cotton from the shoddy materials which mask under that name.

In Germany and France, where girls are still brought up with the idea that they will some day marry and have a household to take care of and to buy for, the young girl is regularly trained in the matter of buying. She is taken to market by the cook or by her mother, and instructed in prices of all foodstuffs, just as she is taught how to cook them.

She is also taken around to the shops and learns to differentiate between good and bad materials, between the lasting and valuable, though possibly more expensive goods, and the cheap and tawdry things, made to please the passing fancy.

Despite the fact that Paris makes the fashions, French women wear their clothes longer than American do, and they have a hundred and one ways of renovating, remodeling and changing last year's garments and making them entirely up-to-date.

First of all, there is the wonderful "sloppess." This is the person who can mend a tear in any kind of material so that it is absolutely impossible to detect it. The process is long and tedious, and consists in sore of weaving of the broken threads, but it saves good clothing that would otherwise have to be thrown away, and I am glad to see that these remarkable needlers are beginning to ply their trade over here.

One little girl naively states that father will "buy her anything she wants," but unfortunately she has no mother to tell her what to get, and she is going to boarding school in the Fall. She wants something that will be "cute" as well as within the regulation of the school, which calls for a uniform. I hope that she can find an older woman in her town who will go with her to the shop and buy her the simple tailored suit of good material, the long, warm coat for rough and rainy weather, a simple little afternoon gown for teas and one muslin or lingerie frock for parties.

This, with the left-overs of her present wardrobe and the middy blouses and kilted skirts which she so sensibly is wearing now, together with the school uniform, should be all that she will need.

Married Life the Third Year

No. 66—HELEN'S INAPPROPRIATE DRESS SPOILS HER DAY AT AN ENGLISH COUNTRY HOUSE

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WELL, it's mighty decent of him to invite us," declared Warren.

"Oh, yes, I know, dear," Helen assented eagerly. "Only it's always so hard for me to meet strangers—and to go to their homes for the day when I've never met any of them——"

"What if you haven't? Morland's been a big help to me over here. He's in a position to throw me in with the men I want to know. Besides, these Englishmen don't often ask you out to their homes—they're not any too keen on Americans. So if he wants us to come out there Sunday—it's the least we can do to go."

He took some letters from his pocket, looking through them hurriedly.

"What'd I do with that time table he gave me? He said there was a train around 10"

"Oh, would we start as early as that?"

"I told you he wanted us to come for the day. Here it is," taking out a small yellow folder and frowning over it. "But you can't find anything on these confounded tables. Nine thirty-five—arrives at Amesly at 10:48. No, that won't do; that's only on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. That's English for you! You break your neck to get a train here and find it doesn't go on that day. Here—9:55. Yes, that's the Sunday train.

"But, dear, what shall I wear I don't know how to dress for a day in the country here."

Warren Objects

"Wear anything. Guess we'll find they're very simple people."

But on Sunday morning, when Helen started to brush the skirt of her gray, tailor-made suit, Warren asked chirply:

"You're not going to wear that?"

"Why, yes, dear; it's the only suit I have."

"Well, don't wear it. They're always making fun of the American women who come over here and wear nothing but tailor-made suits. Put on some kind of a dress."

"But I haven't anything suitable—they're all too dressy."

"Not here. The English dress a lot more than we do. And we'll be there for luncheon."

It was so rarely that Warren ever noticed or made any request about her clothes, that Helen felt forced to comply. She knew she would feel most uncomfortable and over-dressed, but she hurried into a blue changeable silk that she had brought on the steamer. She had nothing to wear over it but her traveling coat, which looked much too heavy.

"Pin up there," admonished Warren. "We've only got twenty minutes."

But Victoria Station was not very far and they made the train in time.

Warren promptly buried himself in an illustrated London weekly. And Helen, who had put on her things so hurriedly, now tried to adjust her hat and veil and "fix" before the narrow mirror in the compartment.

Under any circumstances she would have dreaded the day, but now she dreaded it still more, because she felt inappropriately dressed. There is nothing which so adds to a woman's discomfort and self-consciousness as the feeling that she is badly gowned.

When they left the train at Amesly, Mr. Morland and his son were there in a big touring car to meet them. Warren had said the Morlands were very simple people and Helen was rather surprised at the car.

She was still more surprised when after a few miles' drive they turned in at a very beautiful place with large grounds and gardens. "Pine Grove Lodge" was the name over the gate.

The first few moments in which they were introduced to Mrs. Morland, her sister and the three younger children were for Helen most awkward. She was glad when Mrs. Morland asked if she would not like to go upstairs at once and lay aside her wraps.

A maid showed Helen up to a large bedroom on the floor above. It was a charming room filled with interesting old English furniture.

Helen took off her coat, feeling more than ever over-dressed, as Mrs. Morland had on only a white waist and a black silk skirt.

When she went downstairs again they were all in the drawing room. Young Mr. Morland rose to give her the chair beside his mother. Helen would much rather have gone over to the couch in the corner instead of being conspicuously in the centre of the room. She was always painfully awkward and self-conscious in a group of strangers.

"Is this your first trip?" asked Mrs. Morland.

"Yes, this is my first trip," repeated Helen, trying to think of something to say, "I suppose you and London very different from Boston?"

"Oh, very different," loathing her stupidity.

"This is a very pleasant time of the year to come."

"Oh, yes. We've had a very pleasant weather."

"And I suppose you had a very smooth voyage coming over."

"Yes, it was very smooth."

But here this brilliant dialogue was interrupted by Mr. Morland, who asked if they would not like to see the garden before luncheon.

"Seeing the garden" was evidently a part of every visit to an English home. Mr. Morland and Warren went out ahead, and as she walked alone with Mrs. Morland, Helen felt much more at ease.

"Oh, isn't this Sweet William?" she asked, as they paused at a bed fragrant with these old fashioned flowers. "And this is verbena! Oh, these are marigolds—I haven't seen any since I was a little girl. And what are these—these little white flowers?"

"That's candytuft," answered Mrs. Morland. "But perhaps in America you give it another name."

"Oh, no; we call it Candytuft, too. I remember now we used to have beds of it at grandpa's. What wonderful hollyhocks!"

"Yes, the hollyhocks did very well this year. We've a larger bed at the other end of the garden. Oh, DO be careful!" and Mrs. Morland stooped over to unfasten Helen's dress, which had caught in a rose bush.

As Helen glanced down at the skirt held out by a thorny branch, she realized suddenly that the sun shining on the changeable blue silk was lighting it up to a flame of color. She had worn this only in the evening and had no idea of its iridescent brilliancy.

Oh, why had she put it on today? Why had she let Warren persuade her from the staid tailor-made suit? She would have enjoyed this hour in the garden, but now she could think only of this glittering, conspicuous dress.

She was glad to go in again, away from the sun, where the silk became more subdued. Almost immediately luncheon was announced.

To Helen's surprise and embarrassment, Mr. Morland crossed the room and formally offered his arm to escort her to the table. The dining room was only at the end of the hall, but to Helen, as she walked beside Mr. Morland, awkwardly holding his arm, it seemed very far away.

Warren, who was never disconcerted, had quickly seen that he was expected to take in Mrs. Morland and had offered his arm with easy grace.

But Helen's face was flushed pink when she took the chair at Mr. Morland's right, which he ceremoniously drew out for her.

"Isn't it rather dark in here?" asked Mrs. Moreland. "Elsie you had better draw up the awnings."

More Discomfort

The maid selected the one over the window just in back of Helen. And again the sun shone on the offending silk, lighting it to a gaudy brilliancy. It seemed even more cheaply conspicuous in this dignified room with its dark woodwork and tapestried walls.

While they had called this only luncheon to Helen it seemed a long and ceremonious dinner. To her relief, coffee was served in the drawing room, and she quickly made up for the dark corner of the sofa, although Mrs. Morland urged her to take a more comfortable chair.

It was almost 8 when they started to leave, and Helen was afraid Warren would yield to the repeated invitations to stay for tea.

"Dear, I think we'd better go," she managed to whisper.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Morland went with them to the station in the car. As they stood on the platform waiting for the train, Warren invited them in for dinner some evening next week.

"Well, they're mighty fine people," leaning back and putting up his feet as the train started. "Mrs. Morland's a nice woman. Didn't you like her? And that was a corking good luncheon they gave us."

Helen murmured her assent, but her voice lacked enthusiasm.

"What's the matter with you?" as though it had just occurred to him. "You didn't have much to say—did you? I saw Mrs. Morland trying to draw you out, but you didn't seem to scintillate."

"Oh, Warren, I was so wretched in this dress! I was never so uncomfortable in my life. Oh, WHY did you make me wear it?"

"Make you wear it? What'd I have to do with it? I told you not to wear a tailor-made suit—that's all."

"But I didn't have anything else. And this—oh, didn't you see it when I was in the room—this changeable silk fairly GLITTERED! I never felt so conspicuous —oh, it spoiled my whole day!"

"Spoiled your day—fiddlesticks! If you're going to let a little thing like that upset you! But that's like you—you're so full of egotism; you imagine everybody's scrutinizing you and your clothes. Chances are nobody noticed WHAT you had on."

Safe Hints

To clean a furred iron kettle, fill it with water, add a large tablespoonful of sal ammoniac, and boil it for some minutes. Then empty the kettle and stand it over the fire till it is red-hot, when the fur will peel off. After this fill the kettle with soda and water and boil up to cleanse it. Dry, grease and polish in pure water, when it will be ready for use.

When the eyes ache, relieve them by closing the lids for five or ten minutes. Or if they have a burning sensation, bathe them with warm water to which a dash of witch hazel has been added; if the whites are yellow and the pupils dull, strict attention should be paid to diet.

Never starch linen that is to be stored for a long time; it is apt to crack, and if left for many years will rot. Dress the articles quite free from starch, dry and fold away, if possible, in blue paper. The blue paper keeps them from turning yellow.

It is a good plan, when making starch, to shave off some the pieces of soap and add them to the starch. This gives a beautiful glossy finish to collars and cuffs, and will prevent the irons sticking.

To tell the difference between porcelain and pottery hold the article up to the light. If transparent, it is porcelain. Pottery is opaque, and not so hard and white as porcelain.

A Real "Ship of the Desert"

A NOVEL AND EXCITING SUMMER SPORT

ASPORT that is almost unknown in this country, but is practiced with great enthusiasm abroad, is that of sailing a boat on wheels over hard sand. With a good breeze tremendous speed can be made, a mile a minute often being attained. The wheels are small, but very broad, preventing the "ship" from sliding or skidding. The beaches of England, France and many of the South African resorts hold big race meets every year and class this form of sport as among the best to be enjoyed during the Summer months.

He Calls Himself a Man

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ONE who undoubtedly classes himself as a sample of "the Lord's noblest handiwork—Man," writes the following letter:

"I am twenty-five years of age and have been keeping company with a girl three years my junior for a year and a half. I had been earning $12 a week, but lately an uncle died and left me a sum of money which I feel I ought to enjoy while it lasts.

"But my girl friend doesnt care to dress as I would have her dress. She says she cant afford it, but if she wants to travel with me she has to have some class. So I have given her up. She seems heartbroken, as she loved me dearly. Did I do right or wrong?

I. H. N. U."

The men have claimed since the first man was made that their sex lacks every element of conceit. They have taken to themselves all wisdom. They are the truer, the braver sex, and if there exists a man who doesn't say it, it is because he seeks a reputation for gallantry. Down in his heart he thinks it.

This "I. H. N. U." whom we believe call Alphabet for short, believes that he is a prize. He was sure of it when he got $12 a week, but the world didn't know it. Now that he has inherited a few dollars from an uncle, the world, he thinks, is finding it out.

Not Good Enough

The girl who was good enough for him when he got $12 a week is not good enough for him now. An oft-told tragedy, as many wives have found.

She must have some class if she wants to travel with him! I rejoice in the levelheadedness that leads her to decide to discontinue the journey. I am proud of a girl who refuses to spend more on clothes than she can afford in order to keep the so-called love of a man.

I am delighted to find that such a girl exists, and if she will refuse to set this Alphabet man enter her presence again my delight will be beyond expression.

He wants a girl on high heels who paints her cheeks to match his increased income, and whose "class" will match his own. And that class is of the swagger, imitation order. It is a class that no good sensible girl cares to enter. It is a class that decks itself in a cheap adornment, and that delights in all that is flashy and tawdry.

Those who affect that style are not the kind of people who will stand wear, any more than their tawdry attire will stand a storm.

They are showy and fickle. If they have one good trait it is hidden under ignorance and conceit. If they have a little success they turn that success into failure by letting it turn their heads.

If they have a little money they become the prey of all the unscrupulous. Their conceit is so blinding they loss the power of recognizing the true from the false, and good friends in their humbler days are abandoned for flatterers.

The End in Sight

This man's inherited wealth will not last long. His letter tells a story that ends in financial ruin. He wants to "enjoy it while it lasts," and his manner of enjoyment is such that it will not last long.

This is not the greatest misfortune; he will spend it in such a way he can never again be content with the simple enjoyments he found in his $12 income. That was earned by hard, honest labor. He could not afford any extravagant joys with it, but a pleasure doesn't have to cost much to be a pleasure when one loves, and is with the object of one's affection.

He can't go back. He thinks in his present moments of puffed-up idleness that he doesn't want to go back. But his little inheritance, his own assinine conceit and stupidity, and the day he was born.

He says the girl loves him. That may have been true when he got twelve dollars a week. She knows him so much better now, I am satisfied her feeling for him is largely a pitying contempt.

He is going up like a rocket that will flash in the sky, and he thinks the flash will last. He doesn't realize that no one looks for the burned out stick that falls to the ground.

Did he do right in giving the girl up? Yes, a thousand times yes! For he has saved her from the terrible fate of becoming his wife.

"AND so the janitor thought, but he didn't quite know his man. I'm not sure that I do. But I mean to make his acquaintance, and make it thoroughly, before I let him go. The hero—well, I will say the possible hero—of two such adventures deserves some attention from one so interested in the abnormal as myself."

"Sweetwater, how came you to discover that Mr. Dunn of this ramshackle tenement in Hicks street was identical with the elegantly equipped admirer of Miss Challoner?"

"Just this way. The night before Miss Challoner's death I was brooding very deeply over the Hicks street case. It had so possessed me that I had taken this street in on my way from Pittbush; as if staring at the house and its swarming courtyard was going to settle any such question as that! I walked by the place and I looked up at the windows. No inspiration. Then I sauntered back and entered the house with the fool intention of crossing the courtyard and wandering into the rear building where the crime had occured. But my attention was diverted and my mind changed by seeing a man coming down the stairs before me, of so fine a figure that I involuntarily stopped to look at him. Had he moved a little less carelessly, had he worn his workman's clothes a little less naturally, I should have thought him some college-bred man out on a slumming expedition. But he was entirely too much at home where he was, and too unconscious of his jeans for any such conclusion on my part, and when he had passed out I had enough curiosity to say who he was.

"My interest," you may believe, was in no wise abated when I learned that he was that highly respectable tenant whose window had been open at the time when half the inmates of the two buildings had rushed up to his door, only to find a paper on it displaying these words: 'Gone to New York; will be back at 6:30.' Had he returned at that hour? I don't think anybody had ever asked; and what reason had I for such interference now? But an idea once planted in my brain sticks tight, and I kept thinking of this man all the way to the bridge. Instinctively and quite against my will, I found myself connecting him with some previous remembrance in which I seemed to see his tall form and strong features under the stress of some great excitement. But there my memory stopped, till suddenly, as I was entering the subway, it all came back to me. I had met him the day I went with the boys to investigate the case in Hicks street. He was coming down the staircase of the rear tenement then, very much as I had just seen him coming down the one in front. Only the Dunn of today seemed to have all his wits about him, while the huge fellow who rushed so rudely by me on that occasion had the peculiar look of a man struggling with horror or some other grave agitation. This was not surprising, of course, under the circumstances. I had met more than one man and woman in those halls who had worn the same look; but none of them had put up a sign on his door that he had left for New York and would not be back till 6:30, and then changed his mind so suddenly that he was back in the tenement at 3, sharing the curiosity and the terrors of its horrified inmates.

"But the discovery, while possibly suggestive, was not of so pressing a nature as to demand instant action; and more immediate duties coming up, I let the matter slip from my mind, to be brought up again the next day, you may well believe, when all the circumstances of the death at the Clermont came to light and I found myself confronted by a problem very nearly the counterpart of the one then occupying me.

"But I did not see any real connection between the two cases until, in my hunt for Mr. Brotherson, I came upon the following facts: that he was not always the gentleman he appeared, that the apartment in which he was supposed to live was not his own, but a friend's, and that he was only there by spells. When he was there, he dressed like a prince and it was while so clothed he ate his meals in the cafe of the Hotel Clermont.

"But there were times when he had been seen to leave this apartment in a very different garb, and while there was no one to insinuate that he was slack in paying his debts or was given to dissipation or any overt vice, it was generally conceded by such as casually knew him that there was a mysterious side to his life which no one understood. His friend—a seemingly candid and open-minded gentleman—explained these contradictions by saying that Mr. Brotherson was a humanitarian and spent much of his time in the slums. That while so engaged he naturally dressed to suit the occasion, and if he was to be criticised at all, it was for his zeal which often led him to extremes and kept him to his task for days, during which time none of his uptown friends saw him. Then this enthusiastic gentleman called him the great intellectual light of the day, and—well, if ever I want a character I shall take pains to insinuate myself into the good graces of this Mr. Conway.

LITTLE Winifred had been very keenly interested in gardening work all the Spring. What specially appeared to her had been the sowing of seed, and then the coming of the little plants.

One day mother took her to see a neighbor's baby, who was just ten months old.

"Baby, show the little girl his toodles," ceaed the fond mother, as she opened the little mouthed mouth.

"O—o—oh, mummy," squealed Winifred gleefully, as she saw the two little teeth just peeping through the gums. "Look! His teeth are just coming up!"

Up-to-Date Jokes

It was Sunday afternoon, and the curate, calling unexpectedly to visit a member of his flock, found him out—in two senses.

The gentleman's young son came to the door and announced his father's absence. "He's gone to the golf club," said he, casually, and then, reading, perhaps, some shade of disapproval in the parson's eyes, he extenuated thus: "He's not gone to play golf, you know, not on a Sunday; only to drink beer and have a game of cards."

Having thus cleared his father's character, he shut the door on the dumbfounded cleric.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

FULL OF WOE

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THE tears a woman wipes away on the kitchen towel are the most sincere tears a woman ever sheds.

The tears wiped away with a dainty lace-trimmed handkerchief are sometimes for effect, and between weeps there are furtive glances at the mirror to see if such deep sorrow is making the nose red. When a powder rag appears to remove all signs of woe, the woe is never deep.

The kitchen towel is a comforter that only Mother knows; Daughter's grief is usually so fleeting that it never reaches the kitchen. At least, this is true in the Appleton family.

Daysey Mayme was weeping into a piece of linen three inches square, but her woe, oh's me, was much larger.

She had a birthday. Kin four degrees removed sent boxes of candy and perfume and jewelry, and kin not quite so far removed sent more, that being one of the unwritten rules of Kinville.

Her father had given her a gold watch, her mother had given her a diamond ring, and her brother had spent a month's allowance in buying her a locket as big as the moon.

They expected her to be joyful, for every longing she had expressed was gratified. But she swept them aside with sad eyes, thanked them with the tears coming, and then went to her room to eat her heart out, a cannibalistic feat achieved only by those who love.

For HE, her Best Beloved, had sent her nothing. He had called twice a week for a month, and she knew he loved her, and he knew it was her birthday, and he didn't send even a birthday wish.

What were the gold watch from father, the diamond ring from mother, the gold locket as big as a moon from brother, and all the gifts from kin four degrees removed compared with one little remembrance from him? Ah, nothing, alas, and woe's me!

This forgetfulness meant perfidy. He didn't love her. Nobody loved her. Of course, the family and kin were kind, but why shouldn't they be? Wasn't she the only girl in the family?

If he had only called her up to wish her many happy returns! If he had only—and she cried more and more, thinking how, when she was old and gray, she would still be cherishing the faded flowers if he had only sent her a bouquet, and now she must grow old and die without a single faded token!

And she wept some more, and saw her nose was getting red. Then she got her powder rag and cologne and wiped the tears away and felt better.

But in the enjoyment of the woe of love she found no room for appreciation of what her family had done. And her father went to work with a sigh, and her brother wished he had his money back, and her mother, remembering all the sacrifices the family had made, said nothing, but went out and hid her face in the kitchen towel.

"Not yet, Mr. Bashful," replied Miss Flyppe encouragingly.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

Copper Trading More Brisk Here And in New York

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, Aug. 14.—Midday: The Boston market was strong and active this morning, with Mayflower and Old Colony holding prominence among coppers. The latest about Mayflower is a report from Superintendent Goodale that 90 feet of good amygdaloid were found in No. 20 hole, at depths of from 1,049 to 1,139 feet, while the core showed good copper from 1,049 down to 1,050.

Among coppers to make morning gains were Mayflower, Old Colony, Superior, Calumet & Hecla, Amalgamated, Granby, Isle Royale, Calumet & Arizona and Greene-Cananea. Helvetia and Wolverine sold lower during the first hour.

Aside from this flat Shoe Machinery and New Haven made gains, the railroad issue advancing 1¼.

During the first hour in New York share transactions totalled nearly 250,000.

Financial News in Brief.

The demand for several low-priced railroad shares caused much discussion in stock trading circles. Just prior to this movement, Hayden, Stone & Co., said:

"There are a number of roads with low-priced shares that are well prepared financially for expansion and which are making real advancement in earning power. Under these conditions it should be well to bear in mind the general position of the companies with a view to determining the extent of the speculative facilities afforded in their shares."

Canadian Pacific's gross earnings, railway and steamship lines included, for the fiscal year ending with June total $123,219,541, the operating expenses $80,021,298; the net earnings, $43,208,243.

Business on the London Stock Exchange is improving, but it is not so pressing that its members did not feel they could afford to close it on August 24. They have voted that date to be another holiday.

It is reported that cotton planting in Mississippi Valley States which were flooded in the Spring has been retarded by disinclination to work on the part of plantation hands as long as they can get from rations as "sufferers" from the government.

Attorney-General Wickersham is said to be making a thorough investigation of the effect of the New York clearing house rule which requires members to charge a specified sum for the collection of out-of-town checks drawn on certain parts of the country, and at the same time giving them discretion whether to make charges for similar collections in other localities. The Department of Justice is not sure that the Sherman anti-trust or some other law is not being violated.

During its last fiscal year the Republic Iron and Steel Company earned a surplus equal to 5 per cent. on preferred stock after providing for maintenance and repairs. The gain over the previous year was $321,000. Wall Street now expects that the company will resume preferred dividends in the Fall.

The rise in Pittsburg Coal preferred is accompanied by rumors that something will soon be done towards paying what is due preferred stockholders. Accrued dividends on this 7 per cent. cumulative stock now amount to about 37 per cent. A dividend, however, says no such action is imminent.

During the last fiscal year Northern Pacific's freight traffic increased about $500,000, but passenger patronage declined nearly $2,000,000.

In commenting upon reports of an anthracite coal shortage a man prominent in the trade says the retail price for all kinds will be advanced about twenty-five cents a ton around September 1, but that no further advance will be made "unless unforeseen emergencies arise."

Although election wagers are illegal, pre-cedings in New York, there is some betting going on around Wall Street. A prominent broker has bet $2,000 against $1,000 that Woodrow Wilson will be the next President. Previous betting gave Roosevelt the odds over Taft, but now it is even that 7 to 5 is being offered that the President will get more electoral votes than the Colonel.

Copper Price and Demand.

The London copper warrants market opened firm with spot up 5s and futures 7s 6d higher.

The most recent sales of electrolytic are said to involve small quantities only and to be for domestic consumption. It is stated that more of the red metal is also being used in the brass industry than ever before. This is also true of several other forms of its utilization. The European demand which is waited for as a spur to the market has not yet been felt on a large scale, and producers regard that phase of the situation with equanimity, knowing that foreigners must come to buy soon.

John Stanton, who is inspecting the Silverton and other mines, is quoted at Houghton as saying that the price will rise from 17¾ to 18 cents a pound within sixty days.

The Boston Financial News quotes a representative of one of the largest producing interests as saying that his company has practically disposed of all its September copper and that it would be difficult to book many more orders from domestic consumers for October delivery and at the same time be able to meet the demands of foreign customers.

Mayflower and Old Colony.

Regarding the discoveries in Old Colony No. 16 hole, it is said that while slight evidences of mineralization has been found, nothing as yet identifies anything already with the Mayflower lode. The Boston News Bureau publishes a dispatch reading: "Old Colony No. 16 drift at a depth of 1,131 feet encountered good showing of copper in trap, which continued for 40 feet to eight inches up to the time the core was pulled Tuesday afternoon." Another dispatch in the same publication says: "Mayflower No. 20 drill has uncovered ten feet more of what Superintendent Goodale characterizes as 'good looking material.' In the core extracted there were sixteen pieces, quite rich, some fair, some poor, but on the average good. Assays of this ten feet will be made today. Mayflower No. 19 drill is down about 2,000 feet with no important results. Drill has passed below mineralized horizon."

New York Market Starts Strong.

The New York market was strong at the opening most of the price changes in initial trading being advances. Cheerful sentiment affected the whole list. Canadian Pacific attained the greatest immediate gain, going up 2 points. It was much stronger than for several days in London before the New York market opened. The positive rules which began there often mean recent dividend declaration are apparently over.

Some issues sold in New York this morning at the highest prices they have reached during the present movement. Rails generally were persistently bought. Common and preferred each advanced sharply.

There was some good buying, evidently of an accumulative character, in Reading and Lehigh Valley.

Copper stocks were in demand and Utah Copper, Amalgamated and American Smelting sold higher. Among other stocks the advance were Baltimore & Ohio, Atchison, Union Pacific, St. Paul and Steel. The buying seemed to come from many sources and it is said that the public took an important part in the trading.

The Curb was firm.

It is announced that the Standard Oil of California will issue $20,000,000 of new stock which shareholders of record August 31 will be permitted to subscribe at par. Payments for stock must be made by October 31. This is part of recently authorized capital increase from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000.

Gold Is Yours If You Can Pick Out This Girl

THIS IS HOW YOU DO IT!

Miss Ad Taker of the Boston AMERICAN will be in the following places on Sunday next, between the hours of 2 and 5 P. M.

She will stroll along the sidewalk on the shopping and amusement side of the Boulevard at Revere Beach. She will not cross the drive nor be on the sands nor on the beach side of the Boulevard at any time; you can not capture her here. You must get her on the sidewalk that starts at Condit's and runs along the amusement places to Revere Street. Remember this, she will not cross the automobile drive.

In Worcester she will stroll about the White City and can be captured anywhere within the limits of the place.

At Nantasket she will be on the boardwalk from the Roller Coaster through to the end of the Bath House, or she may be in Paragon Park or on the sidewalk from Paragon Park to the entrance to the Boat Landing. She will not be on the drive, Nantasket Avenue, nor can she be captured there.

The person who identifies Miss Ad Taker of the Boston AMERICAN must have in his or her hand, in plain sight, a copy of Sunday's Boston AMERICAN, and shall say to her while she walks the streets or places mentioned, "You are Miss Ad Taker of the Boston AMERICAN." The first man, woman or child who identifies her, as directed, will receive a Boston AMERICAN order for $100 in gold.

You may know Miss Ad Taker by the photograph published on this page. She may wear a plain hat. She will carry a green parasol. Don't give up the search if you do not see her at first. Search the amusement places and the restaurants. She may be in one of them.

No Compromise with the Enemies of the American Navy

Caucuses at Washington may come and go. Party councils may be called and fail to assemble. "Pork Barrel" conferences may meet and glorify the importance of "Kickskillet" and "Squedunk." But one thing is true: If the fearless and independent group of patriotic Democrats who love country above caucus will all stand firm with the Senate, there will be two battleships voted for the American navy before the Sixty-second Congress adjourns.

The two battleship proposition has won. The public sentiment of the country has won it. The steadfast persistence of the American Senate has won it. And, above all things, the resolute and undaunted courage and Americanism of the independent group of Democrats in the House has won it.

There should be no compromise in this matter. Compromise is surrender. Compromise is distinct consent to lower the status of our navy among nations. Compromise is disloyalty to the Monroe Doctrine. Compromise is unnecessary, because the two battleship fight is won by the stalwart Democrats of the House, who, in co-operation with the loyal Republicans, can save the navy, and thereby save the Democratic party. The leaven of these independent Democrats may leaven the whole lump of the battalion of parsimony and the pork barrel.

The suggestion of compromise comes from those who have steadily opposed the navy and who now recognize that they are beaten.

No compromise is necessary with those who are beaten, and who ought to be beaten, because they are wrong.

Tillman's one monster battleship is simply folly. It would be both unwieldy and unnecessary. It would not raise, but lower, the rank of the navy, because, no matter what the size, it is only one ship, and would not hold up our naval status among nations. It could be in only one place at a time. It could not enter two-thirds of our harbors, and it could not pass through the Panama Canal! The limit in the size of battleships has been reached. Dismiss the Tillman idea as an old man's dream.

Do the Democratic Congressmen who are voting to degrade the American navy realize what they are doing to the navy and to the Democratic party? Do they read the papers? Do they read the "editorials from the people," whose writers in several papers openly threaten to vote against Woodrow Wilson if the Democrats in Congress degrade the navy?

Woodrow Wilson is not responsible for this. He does not deserve it. But the Democrats in Congress whose pork barrel politics are losing votes to Woodrow Wilson must answer to their constituents, and to the party for the damage they are doing.

Let the gallant Democratic friends of the American navy stand firm in Congress. Public opinion and the Senate and the Republicans will see that our great arm of national defence is properly maintained.

Autobiography of a Gambler

The AMERICAN is confident that the life story of Jack Rose will do good. It is being printed in instalments in this newspaper and will be read with absorbing interest by many thousands of young men who stand today with fair prospects in life such as belonged a few years ago to this broken plunger and self-accused instigator of assassination.

The career of Jack Rose will allure nobody. It presents no aspect of success and power. There is in it no suggestion of the lawless happiness and full-blooded freedom of sea rovers and the Jack Cades of imaginative romance. There is only the picture of a man caught in a vise—the gambling vice—like an animal in a trap.

It is evident, from the story of Jack Rose and his manner of telling it, that he was once a man easily capable of winning a respected place in the world. He writes with a graphic pen. He understands the meaning of every step in the miserable drama of his moral decadence. His ungrudging disclosure of actions discreditable and humiliating, even from the standpoint of gamblers and criminals, goes to show that he has a capacity for repentance—a capacity that exists only where real manliness and personal force have once existed.

It would be hard to conceive, even in the form of fiction, a more arrestive warning to young men who are dallying with the temptation to try to "get rich overnight" at games of chance. This sordid but literal and veracious tale of a victim of the gambling disease makes that disease no whit more attractive than brain fever or the bubonic plague.

Water Front Playground

(From the East Boston Free Press.)

The Boston American is helping us tremendously to get a water front playground for the Second Section. It is help that was needed.

Inland playgrounds are well enough, but in the torrid days of Summer the infants need the coolness that comes from the salt water. They must have it in many cases to keep them from dying. One life saved is worth the cost of many water front parks.

Mayor Fitzgerald and the City Council will undoubtedly find funds at an early date for this much needed improvement. East Boston today is one of the most congested parts of the city. What more is there to say? Let us have a part of the water front.

The Reason Why All Husbands and Wives Lie to Each Other

By DOROTHY DIX

ALL husbands and wives lie to each other. Otherwise Reno would be the largest city on the map. It is the more or less white, or gray, or black fib that makes domestic life tolerable.

Probably every married couple regrets the necessity of dallying with the truth and of diluting it down to the degree that makes it set comfortably on the family stomach, certainly it is not the high ideal with which a bridal pair start out. They are strong for veracity and perfect frankness, but after one or two rubs with the plain, blunt facts they go quietly, and secretly and unostentatiously off and qualify for membership in the Ananias and Sapphira clubs, for they perceive that speaking the truth is a luxury that we can indulge in freely only with our enemies, and occasionally with a friend, but never, never with our husbands or wives.

Unless, of course, you are one of those born fighters who are never happy except when he or she is in a scrap. And most of us are poor spirited creatures who like some degree of peace at home—which is not compatible with too much truth.

As a matter of fact, neither husbands nor wives will endure the truth. Each forces the other to lie. Each is actually driven into prevarication when he or she would much rather tell the truth.

For instance, a man doesn't really enjoy lying to his wife about staying downtown of an evening. It hurts his self respect, and degrades him in his own eyes to have to concoct a fairy tale about having to work overtime, or a man feels chicken hearted having on to see him about some important trade, or having to sit up with a sick friend, and he despises both her and himself as he goes into a telephone booth and tries to put the weak fabrication over the wire.

He would much prefer saying: "Hello, is that you Maria? Well, this is John. Say, I've met up with a bunch of the boys and I'm going to stay downtown and have dinner and play poker. Yep. We'll have plenty to drink, and I am staying because I want to and because I've got a right to enjoy myself in my own way occasionally, and I expect to have a lively time, and goodness knows when I'll be home. So don't sit up for me."

That's the truth that the man would like to tell his wife, but he doesn't dare do it. So he tries to subdue the joy in his voice, and chokes out something hypocritical about wishing he could come home and be with his darling little wife, and how he hates to be kept away from her and so on. And Maria has forced him to be a liar because she wouldn't stand for the truth for a minute. Any man who would admit that he had spent an evening enjoying himself outside of the bosom of his family would meet with such an ocean of tears that he would be drowned in it. Therefore the prudent man puts on the life preserver of falsehood before he approaches the briny deep.

And women force their husbands to be liars regarding other women. Ninety-nine wives out of a hundred will naively remark to you: "It is so queer how unobservant my husband is. He never notices how a woman looks, of what she has on, or anything about her. I will say to him, 'wasn't that a beautiful woman we passed just now on the street,' or 'Isn't that woman a stunner in that opera box?' And he'll say, 'Oh, I suppose so. I never noticed her.' Honestly I believe all women look alike to him. I never saw a man so indifferent."

And you smile as you reflect what a gorgeous liar her hubby is, and you know perfectly well that wifey is responsible for his mendacity. He required that vice after the wonder about some peach that he referred to in terms of admiration. He hasn't forgotten what occurred on that occasion, and henceforth it is discretion and lies for his where other women are concerned.

If men are driven to the use of subterfuges in matrimony, how much more so are women? An absolutely truthful wife is an unthinkable proposition. She never has, and never will exist. All even moderately veracious women are old maids.

No man will endure the truth from any woman. Still less will he put up with it from his own wife. Men require to be bamboozled by women. They like it, and demand it as their right.

Every woman who gets along in reasonably peace and comfort with her husband has to do it by art and diplomacy, and not by plain above-board dealings. She has to pretend that things are true that she would have to be a fool to believe. She has to act the hypocrite, and keep it up, or else there is trouble.

Women don't enjoy this. They would far rather speak the truth if their husbands would let them, but they won't. A woman would like to come out flatfooted and tell her husband that she wants a new dress and intends to have it, and that she thinks she earns about nine times more than she ever gets by the cooking and sewing and mending she does, and that it makes her perfectly sick to have to wheedle every cent she gets out of him, and that she thinks he's a selfconceited, egotistical old mush because he can be worked by a little soft soap.

But she doesn't tell him the truth. On the contrary, she lies to him about how grand and noble and smart and big he is, and how generous she thinks he is to give her a dress, and how lucky she is to have such a husband. And as she finishes she says to herself, "There, you made me do it. And the sin's on your soul, not mine."

Nor does she dare tell him the truth about how tired and bored she gets of his society, and of how glad she is to go away in the Summer and leave him, and she pities him for how he's going to miss her and the children, and then both of them wonder if the other is as big a fibber as he or she is.

And so it goes, and the more gifted the romancer, the more esteemed is he or she as husband or wife, for truth has no place in the domestic circle. It is ever the most unwelcome guest, and the minute that a husband and wife begin telling each other their real opinions and the unadorned facts in the case, they are headed for the divorce court.

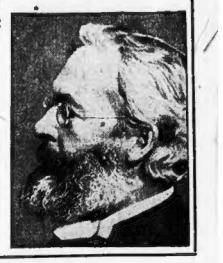
This Inadequate Civilization of Ours

—AND—

What Its Finest Product Is



Written for the American by

DR. C. H. PARKHURST

THE finest product of civilization is a man who is healthy in body, clear in intellect and warm and pure in his affections. Let this once be understood and one can realize, in a way otherwise impossible how utterly inadequate is our present form of civilization to the production of the best results.

That is not the kind of commodity that the social machinery is turning out, nor is it, except in very limited degree, the end toward which the social machinery is being worked. Very few people prize a beautiful life as something that is beautiful in itself, and more beautiful by far than anything which the admirable powers exercised by that life may be able to gain or achieve.

Once in a while, when a great man dies, a man whom we know to have been thoroughly fine all through, physically hale, big in his thinking, sweet and generous in all his feeling and loving, the public comes to its senses in the matter, forgets all about what he has said and done, and thinks only of the splendid thing that he himself was.

Under ordinary circumstances, however, the public does not get down to its best judgment in such matters. Powers of body, mind or heart, that are required, are usually prized, not for the value that inheres in them, in themselves considered, but only for what they may be able to secure, exactly as the money-getter values his thousand dollars, not for any worth that may inhere in it, but only because he can invest it, and by that means get some more of the same kind.

Rounds of the Ladder Whose Top Is Never Reached

In the same way the finer acquisitions are not valued and enjoyed for their intrinsic beauty, but only as rounds in the ladder whose top is never reached. It is like a tourist travelling to some distant region, reputed to be surpassingly beautiful, but neglecting all the lesser beauties that lie along the way, and finally dying before reaching the region toward which his quest was directed.

Children, youth, young men, go to school, college or the university, but only a very small minimum of them attach any value to their acquired knowledge as they go along or pursue their studies with the idea that to be educated is what a man is made for, quite apart from the uses to which he will put his education, and that without culture he just so far falls short of the destiny to which he was appointed, be the results large or small, that he is able to achieve in the world without the aid of culture.

It would be interesting to know how many of the boys in Harvard, for instance, ever think of it that their daily acquisitions are so much addition to their personal worth, and that to be personally worth something is greater in the sight of God and of reasonable men, than to be thereby possessed of the means of filling large positions in the social, economic or financial world.

The statement made at the beginning of this article, that fine manhood is the choicest product of our civilization, is often repeated, but it is not practically adopted into the life, and the very men and women that repeat it will hurry their children through their schooldays in order that they may sooner be put to work, established in business and be making for themselves a name and a fortune.

Fine Manhood Is the Choicest Product of Our Civilization

It is simply pathetic the way in which even the children are in this way taught to believe that simple manhood—that combination of all that is finest in body, mind and heart—is of little account in comparison with what they are going to be able to get in the world by means of the small smatterings of manhood that their ambitious parents give them time to acquire.

And we ought to mention here all those hundreds of thousands and millions, everywhere throughout our country, who never have the opportunity to become fine in their physical, intellectual and emotional life; the millions who are condemned to mediocrity and inferiority by the conditions of life that are forced upon them by our material civilization, which thinks everything of the dollar and little or nothing of the man—a civilization that grinds up the many in order to make food for the few as the insensible grindstones of the miller turn corn into meal.

These are things to talk and write and preach about. Think of the little boys and girls that are drafted into the sweatshops, the factories and the mines. What chance have they to become the beautiful men and women that it is their divine right to become—a right that is denied them by those poor apologies of men who are able, by the enormity of their worldly possessions, to administer society in this fashion, or if they are the sacrifice of humanity, and whose worst achievement is that they propagate among all classes the notion that to get ahead is a man's one proper ambition, and that what deserve to be known as the spiritual and eternal values are to be taken account of only as they are convertible into material commodities, available for the comfort, luxury and pride of an affluent minority.

Only a Few Have Chance to Become Healthy, Cultivated and Pure

So long as only a comparatively few have the opportunity to become healthy in body, cultivated in mind, and pure and refined in all sweetness of affection, our civilization, with all its pretense and glitter, has nothing of which it can reasonably and honorably boast.

If all these millions who are sickly and ignorant and vicious were so because it is not in their nature and constitution to be anything else, or if they were simply a superior order of cattle, the above criticism would be inapplicable.

But once grant that they are humans, our criticism stands, and the guilt of the situation lies at the doors of those who have Christian sense enough to appreciate the situation and faculties for doing something at least toward bettering it.
